F. D. R. Phones Byrnes, Farley At Convention

Special White House-to-Chicago Line Set Up; Lunches With Hull.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—(P)—President Roosevelt lunched with Secretary Hull and talked with Senator Byrnes, Democrat, South Carolina, over a special White House-Chicago telephone circuit while dividing his time today between official business and keeping check on the Democratic convention.

Mr. Roosevelt called Byrnes at Chicago soon after his meeting with the secretary of state. Since both the South Carolina senator and Hull have been mentioned as possible vice presidential nominees on a ticket headed by Mr. Roosevelt, there was speculation that this figured in their conversations.

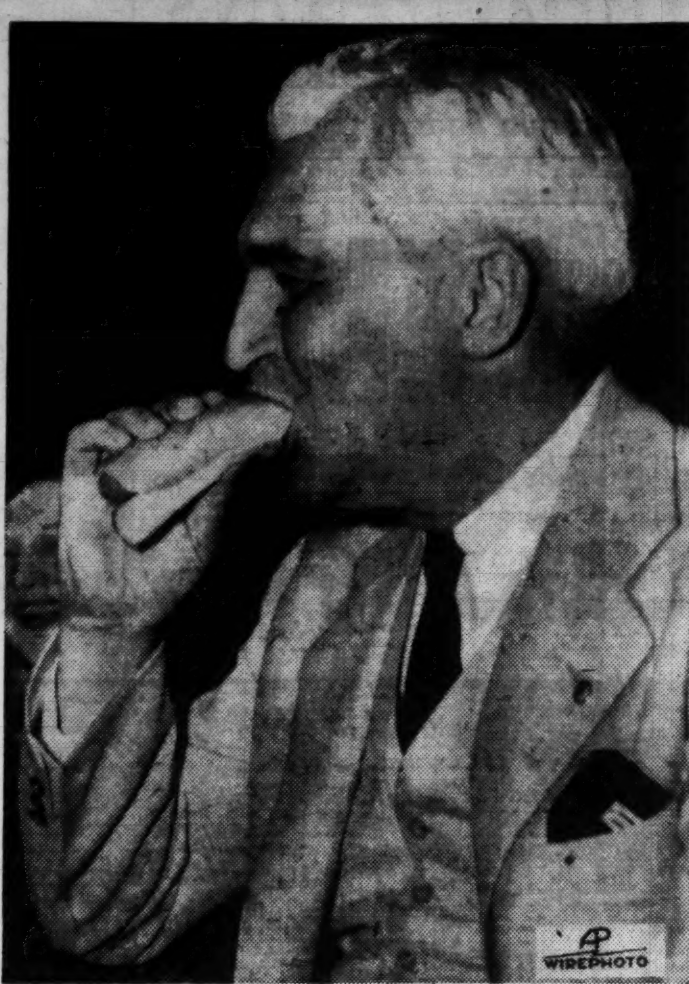

Stephen Early, presidential secretary, said the President and secretary of state discussed the Pan-American conference opening in Havana Saturday.

The call to Byrnes, he said, was to find out what was going on, in Chicago, and the senator did most of the talking.

Early disclosed in the forenoon that a direct telephone wire had been set up between the White House and Chicago and asserted that the first call over it was to James A. Farley.

The Democratic chairman was on the speaker's platform in the convention auditorium when the President got him on the line to wish him a successful convention.

Early said Mr. Roosevelt inquired how things were going and Farley responded with an "okay" and word that the convention was ready to start.

MAN MUST EAT—Even a "big shot" in the Democratic party gets hungry, and Social Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt wades into a hot dog while listening to Speaker Bankhead's keynote address. The convention made McNutt miss his dinner, but this is photographic proof that he didn't allow his political enthusiasm to make him go hungry.

No Traffic Death Listed for 30 Days

Atlanta yesterday passed the 30th day without a traffic fatality, police reported. Last year, at the same period, more than 60 days elapsed without a death, officials of the traffic bureau said.

Nineteen traffic fatalities within the city limits have occurred this year, the same number recorded for a similar period last year.

Army of Netherlands Has Ceased to Exist

AMSTERDAM, July 15.—(P)—The Netherlands army, defeated, interned, and finally released, virtually ceased to exist today as a fighting force.

Leaving only a skeleton organization, 55,000 men were transferred to reconstruction projects and about 400,000 returned to civil life, advised to find jobs.

Georgia Chiefs To Back F.D.R. Choice - Gillis

Delegates Trying to Learn Roosevelt's Selection for Running Mate

CHICAGO, July 15.—(P)—James L. Gillis, chairman of the Georgia Democratic executive committee, today said the state's delegation, disregarding a drive to name a southerner, was ready to support a Roosevelt choice for vice president.

"I say this because I have talked to all members of the tiny group most likely to disagree," Gillis declared. "We are 100 per cent behind anybody the President says he wants."

Georgia support was sought during the day for Speaker Bankhead and Senator James Byrnes, of South Carolina, Gillis explained. While either would be acceptable to Georgians, he added, "We are declining to voice a preference until we try to learn the President's choice."

Hundreds of Georgians and former Georgians visited the state's headquarters in the Palmer House during the day.

Roy V. Harris, speaker of the Georgia house of representatives, was kept busy with the platform committee, of which he is a member. He asserted his principal interest was a defense plank, which he wanted to make as "strong as possible."

Mrs. Roosevelt Opposes 'Equal Rights' Plank

Fears Amendment Would Work Hardship on Working Class.

CHICAGO, July 15.—(P)—In the biggest little battle of the Democratic convention, that strictly feminine melee over equal rights, the nation's first lady took a firm stand today against altering women's legal status by constitutional amendment.

It would be a "grave mistake" at this time, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt advised the convention platform committee, for the Democratic party to endorse the amendment method of giving women full equality with men.

Her statement was presented by Mrs. Nan Wood Honeyman, member of the Democratic women's advisory platform committee.

The main platform group, caught in the cross-fire of statement and counter-statement, listened, thanked Mrs. Honeyman, and wondered just what a group of men with a weather eye to the feminine vote ought to do in a case like this.

The conflict has on the one side that group of women, including Mrs. Emma Guffey Miller, Pennsylvania national commitwoman, who would assure women, through the proposed amendment, that they could sue, manage their property and have custody of their children just as well as men.

On the other side, the group with which Mrs. Roosevelt was identified would seek improvement of women's legal status by local action in states where that was necessary. Thus, they claim, they would preserve protective legislation enacted for the benefit of women in industry.

Youth Recovering From Long Fall

Ruell Clyde Dunn, 11, who fell nearly 250 feet down the northeast slope of Stone Mountain and lived to tell about it, last night was recovering from his sprains and bruises at Grady hospital.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Dunn, of Perkerson road, he slipped in a puddle of water while picnicking Sunday afternoon with his parents.

He was unconscious at the end of his fall—broken by a clump of bushes—but suffered no broken bones and said yesterday that all he remembered was a "terrible headache."

heavily upon the domestic political arena, and both parties should avoid "criminations and personal innuendo."

He related the course of German conquest in Europe, naming countries that have fallen until "only Great Britain alone stands against the hurricane of the blitzkrieg."

"And now," Bankhead declared, "Hitler and Mussolini have sworn their total annihilation. They have furthermore sworn eternal enmity against all so-called decadent democracies, and that includes us."

"I do not know what attitude this convention may take on this subject, but I know that it is the attitude of the American people that we will resist to the death any compromise of our democratic principles with those malignant disturbers of the peace of the world; that we do not propose to appease those aggressors whose doctrines wage war upon every principle of liberty for a free people that our Declaration of Independence proclaimed and our federal constitution preserved."

In his discussion of national defense the speaker took direct issue with the Republican assertion that President Roosevelt has failed to provide adequate armaments and that one in power the Republicans would do so.

Cites Figures.

Bankhead related a story of disarmament and slowed-up naval construction during the Republican administrations of the 1920's. From 1922 to 1934, he said, Republican administrations caused to be laid down "a total of only 35 combat ships." During the Roosevelt administration, Bankhead continued, there were laid to June, 1940, "a grand total of 153 new units in seven years."

He gave the following as his "startling summary of ships authorized and constructed for the navy under the last previous Republican and the present Democratic president: "During Mr. Hoover's administration, none; during Mr. Roosevelt's administration, 326."

He said, too, that the army has now an authorized strength of 375,000 men and the national guard, 251,000 men. The air force, he added, has an ultimate objective of 50,000 planes.

"That is the record," Bankhead thundered. "Let the opposition make the most of it."

On another phase of defense, the involvement in the Fifth Column activities, Bankhead said legislation already enacted provided "every possible restraint upon and punishment of these enemies of our institutions that could be devised within the limits of our constitution."

Won't Send Men Abroad.

The keynote speaker wove into his address some quotations from recent formal statements of Mr. Roosevelt, citing among these, in connection with the defense-foreign situation the President's statement in a defense message last Wednesday that "we will not use our arms in the way of aggression; we will not send our men to take part in European wars."

Farley said "the whole issue" of this year's elections is a choice between a Republican party "unable to cope with" the problems of the 20th century and a Democratic party which has made this country "the last stronghold of genuine democracy."

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bruce Mills, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Cummings and Clyde Hamilton Hodges, the pilot, all of Los Angeles.

Sheriff Oren P. Brown said the plane evidently lost altitude sharply over the high Sierra range. It was demolished.

The Mills and Cummings flew to Reno to attend the wedding of Tyrus Barre and Margaret Wiley, both of Oakland.

Praises Roosevelt.

Farley referred to Mr. Roosevelt as "a great President" and said the record of the last eight years would be given "a rightful place among the bright pages of national achievement."

He also declared that an effort to label his party as "a war party" had failed and that there was no difference of opinion among Democrats on the proposition that "no American boy will be sent to die on the battlefields of Europe." The administration has pledged that, Farley declared, and "this compact will be kept."

Farley asserted that, "whether we like it or not," this country must continue the Monroe Doctrine policy of keeping this hemisphere "safe from colonization or conquest by any predatory power."

"Under these circumstances," he asked, "is there a man on this floor, or a real American within the sound of my voice, who should be willing to take the government out of the hands of the party that has kept the faith and place it in the inexperienced hands of those who aspire to regain control of the government?"

Third-term sentiment is the real keynote of the convention. Just before the convention started, Farley, who has been guarding the President's secret for a week, talked to the chief executive over a special telephone circuit linking the White House with Chicago. In response to a question as to how "things are going," Farley told the President, simply, "Okay."

Farley himself told a press conference that his name would be put in nomination for the presidency prior to a roll call which would give delegates an opportunity to express "their view."

But in the same breath he forecast that before the results of the first ballot are announced, the nomination—of President Roosevelt—would be made unanimous.

While the convention was going on an attorney for a brother of the late Jacob Ruppert was asserting that the New York Yankees baseball club probably would be sold to a syndicate headed by Farley "within two weeks at a price of $4,000,000." This was taken as a sign that Farley would not stay on as national chairman very long.

Green Gives Hint.

The resolutions committee, meantime, was busy on the platform, hearing William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, assert that Mr. Roosevelt would find an answer to the unemployment problem if "permitted," and listening to Dr. Francis E. Townsend threaten to start a third party if the two major parties failed to endorse his pensions movement.

Managers of the "draft Roosevelt" movement, canvassing the field of possible vice presidential nominees, were reported to be giving most thought to the following:

Secretary of State Hull, Senator Byrnes, of South Carolina; Jesse Jones, federal loan administrator; Paul V. McNutt, federal security administrator, and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace.

These men were less than half of the total of "favorite son" and other vice presidential possibilities, the field of actual and potential candidates having been greatly enlarged by withdrawals from the presidential race in the face of the Roosevelt drive.

The possibility of another Roosevelt-Garnett ticket was regarded as almost if not entirely, non-existent.

The convention, which may break one of the nation's great traditions, the third term, began by shattering another. It was only five minutes in starting. Par for opening a session of a national convention is an hour behind schedule. But, having unobtrusively mounted the platform at noon, the convening hour, Farley stepped forward two minutes later, received a burst of applause and began swinging his gavel. Despite wide stretches of empty seats on the floor and in the galleries, he got things going at five after.

Visitor Sees Horses in Hotel, Thinks He Has the Big Jitters

By EDDY GILMORE.

CHICAGO, July 15.—(P)—Another letter to the folks back home from a delegate to the Democratic national convention . . .

Dear Folks: We got the convention started today and it was as pretty as a picture.

You remember the time we let those chewing tobacco people paint the barn and the painter got into the home brew? Well, the Chicago stadium is the only thing I ever saw to equal the barn.

Red, white and blue is almost everywhere.

Things started when Jim Farley got up with a gavel and the band played "Take me out to the ball game." This was a funny thing because lots of people here say Jim is going to be the next president of the New York Yankees based team instead of President of the United States, but I would not know about that.

Anyhow, after Jim took his seat I managed to wedge myself up to him and ask him if there was anything significant in the song.

He looked straight at me, folks, and said knowingly:

"That song, it's all right, I think."

A young fellow named Phil Regan, who used to be a policeman, sang the "Star-Spangled Banner," and maybe it is true what they say about who knows the words. Phil didn't—he had them written out.

I have a very pretty badge, but it's not as big and pretty as some of them. The fellows with the biggest badges are the assistant tally clerks.

A fellow who sits next to me said they ought to get a medal for the work they're going to have to do.

"Work?" I asked him, "what sort of work?"

"Adding up votes," the fellow said, "for you know who?"

I said I guessed he was right.

The delegates from Texas arrived and you should have seen them. They had a cowboy band and six white horses. They rode the white horses into the hotel and my, my.

One fellow I know was just coming out of one of those cocktail places when the horses came in. Folks, you should have seen him when he saw those horses in the lobby.

You tell the man who runs the ice plant at home that he's in the wrong city. Last night some of the boys were up to the room. I sent down for six glasses and some ice and they came—$1.11. The $1.10 was for the ice and the empty glasses.

"What's the one cent for?" I asked the fellow who brought them.

"That's the tax," he said.

"Tax on what?" I asked him, pointing to the empty glasses.

"Well, sir," he said, "if there was something in them the tax would be much higher."

I'll let you know everything. Yours, HENRY.

Farley Backers Resentful in Face of Trend Odds at Present Are in Favor of Chairman Resigning.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS, Staff Correspondent.

CHICAGO, July 15.—As the gavel fell on the opening day of the twenty-eighth Democratic national convention the best evidence thus far offered of President Roosevelt's intention to accept renomination was seemingly found in the growing attitude of resentment shown by close friends and personal followers of Postmaster General James A. Farley, who alone among party leaders is known to share the President's confidence regarding a third term.

Outcroppings of anti-third term sentiment, much of it traceable to Mr. Farley's friends, have been out of all proportion to the realities of the situation, measured by the fact that upwards of three-fourths of the delegates are pledged to a third-term nomination. Incongruous though it is, it has proved a disturbing factor to party leaders and has been made the sensation of preliminary stages of the convention by Chicago newspapers.

Feel Injustice Done.

The hostility of Farley supporters to a third-term is built on the thesis that a grave injustice has been done by postmaster general's presidential ambitions by the failure of Mr. Roosevelt to make known his intentions earlier.

Now Mr. Farley, the national party chairman, is presumed to have been told by President Roosevelt just what his plans were in the head-to-head talk the two of them held at Hyde Park week before last. If the President had indicated any disposition to decline the nomination, thus opening the way for Mr. Farley's selection for one place or another on the ticket, it is hardly likely that the latter's friends today would be imbued with a feeling of so much hostility to the chief executive.

Opposed to Third Term.

The only assumption, as trained observers see it, is that Mr. Roosevelt, in that Hyde Park conference, threw no obstacle in the path of a draft nomination, which the convention is prepared to execute on the first ballot.

There is no question about the hostility of Mr. Farley to a third-term nomination. He is known to have been opposed to the idea on principle for a long time. While other party leaders have been brought around after taking an initial stand against it, he has been unyielding.

Also there seems little doubt any longer about his determination to resign as national party chairman and as postmaster general once the President accepts the nomination.

The stories about him heading a syndicate to acquire the New York Yankee baseball club are true, and despite the pressure being brought on him to continue on in his party post at least for the duration of the campaign, he has shown no signs of relenting. He is supposed to be prepared to announce his resignation the day after the convention closes this week.

Whether the President sought to dissuade him at Hyde Park or may make another effort in this direction once the party ticket is selected, remains to be developed. Some profess to think that party loyalty and the long partnership between Mr. Roosevelt and his postmaster general and political mentor, may be considerations which will prevail in the final decision.

THIRD TERM URGED.

DALTON, Ga., July 15.—A resolution endorsing President Roosevelt for a third term and urging him to accept if nominated, was voted here Saturday by the Whitfield Democratic executive committee.

Willkie Says F. D. R. To Win On First Ballot

Recalls He Predicted Own Nomination Upon Sixth Vote.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Col., July 15.—(P)—Wendell L. Willkie heard the opening of the Democratic convention by radio today, and predicted President Roosevelt would be renominated on the first ballot.

The Republican nominee said that Senator James F. Byrnes, Democrat, South Carolina, had demonstrated a sense of humor in saying, at Chicago yesterday that the Democratic convention would be "unbossed."

At his press conference, Willkie said he had predicted his own nomination correctly on the sixth ballot at the Republican convention in Philadelphia, and wanted to keep his record straight as a forecaster.

When the Democrats ballot, Willkie said, he would listen to the proceedings by radio.

Atlanta Leads Dixie in Pure Water Supply

Fluid Kept 99 Per Cent Pure by 400,000 Tests.

(Carolyn McKenzie, The Constitution's girl picture reporter, takes her camera and note paper into the highways and byways of Atlanta to gather her news. She visited the city water works yesterday and learned of the rich heritage which Atlantans have in their water supply. In the following article, and the accompanying pictures which she made, Carolyn tells of the various branches of the water department, and of the great value which we have in being able to step to any faucet and draw a glass of drinking water which is more than 99 per cent pure.)

By CAROLYN MCKENZIE. Imagine having to distill each glass of water; or having to caution the kiddies not to drink from spigots when they are out playing. Then imagine having 99 per cent-plus pure water at every tap which you touch.

The former might present a desolate, seemingly impossible picture—but one which exists in many cities. The latter describes Atlanta, the city with the largest pure food plant in the south.

The city water works is a pure food plant because water is an essential food. These and many other interesting facts are pointed out each year to more than 3,000 visitors to this civic institution. All mankind, whether wandering savage, isolated pioneer or dweller in a crowded city, must have water for drinking purposes and for cleansing himself and his belongings. Paul Weir, superintendent of filtration, points out to visitors at the plant. Every man uses water for irrigation, for power and in manufacturing, as well as for extinguishing fires, flushing sewers, beautifying recreational parks and many other purposes.

Municipally Owned. The Atlanta system has been a municipally owned and operated utility for 86 years. It has been under the constant general management of W. Zode Smith for the past 28 years. During this time, the system has grown from a very small unit, serving a few thousand persons, to its present value of about $20,000,000, serving 350,000 persons using 35,000,000 gallons of water daily. The low mineral content and high purity of Atlanta's water make it ideally suited for both domestic and industrial uses and, as such, has won a national reputation for its superior quality. Constant care and supervision are required to guarantee this rating. Weir pointed out. More than 400,000 physical, chemical, bacteriological and microscopical tests are conducted annually, under the supervision of competent, skilled personnel, to insure uniform quality.

The system is divided into five units, each of which is definitely related to every other point. But these units, though widely scattered throughout Fulton county, work together to supply us with a rich heritage—a miracle at our convenience every minute of the day, every day of the year.

Persons who have never tossed aside their cares and worries to tour the water plants and see just what we get from paying the water bill should make this trip. You hear water, see water, and learn so much about water that a glass of the silver-clear liquid becomes a choice morsel.

Five Units of Plant. Those persons will learn just what these five units are, and what the service of each is, as well as their value to the entire water supply. The River pumping station, located on the east bank of the Chattahoochee river, near Bolton, is eight miles northwest of Five Points. The river water is fed by tremendous boiling springs from the mountainous area of north Georgia, and drains almost 1,500 square miles before it reaches Atlanta. The purification plants, located on a 150-acre tract of land, convert the raw river water into a pure, crystal clear product.

Hemphill pumping station is a duplicate of the River station, and adjoins the purification plants. It pumps purified water into Atlanta's 700-mile iron pipe distribution system for general consumption.

The distribution, maintenance and meter shop is at North and Hemphill avenues; while the administrative office is in the city hall.

And thus these five integral parts, together with the corps of skilled workmen and officials, contribute toward making Atlanta a pure water city—the greatest in the south.

Defense-Buying Guide Available

Business men were offered a guide for use in co-operating with the national defense procurement program yesterday by C. P. Parsons, district manager of the Atlanta Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, United States Department of Commerce.

The guide details locations of War and Navy Department field procurement offices and a partial list of materials being purchased by these agencies. "Use of the bulletin by business men will facilitate negotiations of transactions for national defense and will save time and expense now absorbed by visits to Washington," Parsons said.

Banks Increase Loans For 6th Straight Week

WASHINGTON, July 15.—(AP)—Banks increased commercial, industrial and agricultural loans for the sixth straight week in the seven days ended July 10. The Federal Reserve Board said the trend was shown by banks in 101 leading cities, where last week's gain in the business classification amounted to $9,000,000. This made an increase of $80,000,000 in the same cities in the last six weeks, bringing their total to $4,447,000,000.

Food Is Found Cure for Pupils Believed 'Bad'

Georgia Educators Find Hot Lunches Help Conduct, Scholarship.

Feed a small boy and he won't pop you in the neck with a piece of chalk when you turn around to write on the blackboard.

Stuff him with calories and he won't pull the hair of the little girl who sits in front of him.

Give school children hot, nourishing lunches and they will give you the best that's in them in attention to their studies and quiet demeanor.

These things, Georgia educators have found out in the past five years—ever since they learned that delinquency problems and problems of conduct are definitely tied up with plain old-fashioned hunger.

Since that time, more than 9,000,000 hot lunches have been served in Georgia schools. Teachers report an amazing decrease in behavior problems. They found out that bad youngsters had been bad because of gnawing hunger, or long-drawn-out undernourishment.

They gain weight. They get much better marks. Their attendance is better, for their health is better and they are out far less often with sickness, since the schools have started serving food. There is no embarrassment for those who receive their lunches free. Nobody knows who pays and who doesn't, except the teacher. The WPA furnishes labor and supervision for operation of the cafeterias. Civic clubs and P-T-A's help raise money for the lunches. Some rural schools have their own gardens, cultivated by older boys. Much canning is done for winter use by school patrons who cultivate gardens for the schools.

The peachtree switch, the paddle and strap are going out of Georgia schools. A good thick sandwich and a glass of milk works better.

Annenberg Mercy Appeal Is Studied

CHICAGO, July 15.—(AP)—Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson took under advisement today a plea for probation for M. L. Annenberg, based largely on medical testimony that the Philadelphia publisher was a seriously ailing man.

Judge Wilkerson, who on July 1 sentenced Annenberg to three years imprisonment on his plea of guilty to evasion of $1,217,296 income taxes on his 1936 income, said he might order examination of Annenberg by a government specialist.

Three Philadelphia doctors testified Annenberg had heart, sinus and rectal trouble, arterio-sclerosis, coughing spells, secondary anemia and insomnia.

His lawyer, Weymouth Kirkland, also said the public interest was served sufficiently by Annenberg's arrangement to pay the government $8,000,000, plus interest, in settlement of all civil income tax claims. Annenberg has already paid $800,000, first installment on the settlement.

Gasoline Price Reduced Half-Cent Per Gallon

Atlantans were purchasing their gasoline for one-half cent less on the gallon yesterday following the price reduction by the larger companies here.

When the new federal defense tax went into effect two weeks ago the price of gasoline went up one-half cent on the gallon. Now regular gasoline is being bought for 20 cents a gallon with the high-test gasoline selling at 22 cents a gallon.

PESTERED BY FILTHY ANTS?

Here's what to do: First, keep kitchen floors, pantries, shelves, cupboards, etc., free from food particles, sugar, etc. Second, sprinkle Bee Brand Insect Powder in corners and along the back edges of shelves, back of and under the sink, refrigerator and stove. Blow it into cracks and crevices, back of and under wall boards. Build powder barriers between ants and places where they feed. Repeat these treatments regularly. Bee Brand kills ants, roaches and other crawling insects quick—yet it's entirely safe to use. Insect on the ground in the red and yellow can. It's sold with a guarantee of satisfaction or your money back.

Venue Change Denied in Flog Case Appeal

High Court Holds George Cameron Can Receive Fair Hearing.

The Georgia court of appeals denied a change of venue yesterday to George Cameron, indicted on four counts of assault and battery in connection with a series of night-riding floggings in the vicinity of Atlanta.

The case was argued before the court only last Saturday, on appeal from Fulton county superior court which had denied Cameron's plea for transfer of trial. The decision sustained the lower court with the appellate court observing:

"We are convinced that the press and other public comments were directed against the principals of lawlessness, and well within the province of its legitimate function."

"We cannot feel, under the evidence in this case, that when and if lawlessness takes sway in any community, that public protest against such principal should be condemned. None of the articles or comments mentions the defendant in connection with the 'flogging cases' except the bare notice that his case had been or would be called to trial."

Cameron contended he could not obtain an impartial trial in Ful-

County Suffers Water Damage Of $100,000

Full Extent of Costs Not Yet Known, Engineer Says.

Water damage to the roads and highways in Fulton county during the last two weeks of rain will cost the taxpayers approximately $100,000, A. T. McDonald, county engineer, estimated yesterday.

There are more than 1,600 miles of county-maintained roads in the county and the serious damage to these has not yet showed up fully, he said.

"Water drains in many places have been inadequate to take off the excess water," he explained. "It has backed up and seeped under the concrete and asphalt in hundreds of places. In a short while these places will break through and make holes in the hard surfaces."

McDonald said that convict labor has been used very little during the rainy spell, because the law prohibits use of the prisoners in bad weather. This has been an additional cost, he said.

"It will take us months to repair all the damages," he asserted. "Much of the most recent grading work we have done on roads will have to be done over again because the dirt washed away before we had finished."

Funds Sought For Children To Go to Camp

Youngsters Given Good Food, Training at Mountain View.

Dr. Felton Williams, director of the Atlanta Mission, yesterday broadcast another appeal for funds with which to send some of Atlanta's underprivileged children to the mission's Mountain View camp, near Hapeville.

A throng of Atlantans attended "open house" at the camp Sunday afternoon to see the kind of life the youngsters lead while they enjoy the country environment. Causing much comment among the visitors were the vegetable gardens and dairy which provide the children with wholesome food.

While at the camp the boys and girls engage in handicraft, dramatics, swimming, vespers, dancing and many other activities which train them to take their place in their respective communities.

Hundred of Atlanta boys and girls will be given the advantages of this camp if Atlantans make sufficient donations, either large or small. One child can be kept at the camp for a week for $5. Several Sunday school classes in Atlanta are "adopting" groups of children, Dr. Williams said.

4-H Club Members Will Attend Camp

Nearly 100 4-H Club boys from DeKalb and Rockdale counties will spend three days next week at Oak Hill Springs, near Lithonia, where they will be instructed in woodworking, outdoor life and swimming.

The camp will be directed by E. P. McGee, DeKalb county agent, who is taking 70 boys, and L. C. Rew, of Rockdale county, who will be accompanied by 25 boys.

G. I. Johnson, engineer for the University of Georgia extension division, will be woodworking instructor and Harris Walton, district wild life ranger, will conduct tours through the woods. Swimming will be taught by Red Cross workers.

ton county because of newspaper, radio and public comments of the night-riding cases, and alleged there was "probability of mob violence" should he be forced to trial and should be acquitted. Cameron's trial cannot be held, however, until the September term of court, attaches of the solicitor general's office said. It had been planned originally to try him on four flogging counts during the week of July 29, when a special session of superior court will be held, but this plan was interrupted when the judges ordered that only cases of persons held in jail be placed on the calendar. Cameron is at liberty under bond.

Self-Evident Truth

The speech of Prime Minister Winston Churchill, of Britain, heard Sunday afternoon in this country by shortwave radio, was compound of self-evident facts and of exhortations to his countrymen to remain firm and unshaken in whatever horror of mechanized war the enemy, Nazi Germany, can send against them.

In stating that the French fleet, if it had been permitted to fall into Hitler's hands, would have endangered both Great Britain and the United States, Mr. Churchill said only what every intelligent person on either side of the Atlantic has long known to be fact. It is only the overwhelming strength of Britain on the seas which has, so far, served as bulwark against the Nazi horde, both for Mr. Churchill's own country and for this nation. As a matter of realistic fact, the existence of the British fleet has been the only reason why the United States, for so many years, has been able to feel secure with merely a one-ocean navy of her own.

To have permitted Hitler to acquire such a fleet as that of old France which, combined with his own ships and those of Italy, could have formed a genuine menace to British rule of the seas, would have been foolhardy. It would, too, have been extremely dangerous to this country.

It may have seemed, at the time, bitter that Britain was forced to turn naval guns and torpedoes against an erstwhile ally, France, but there was, in the circumstances, no other course possible.

Now, with only Britain standing against the Nazi in Europe, it is more than ever true that the safety of this country depends on what Britons may do, in the next few months, to halt the onward march of Hitler's motorized legions. If Britain can stop Hitler, can drive him back from whence he came, the United States, and all world democracies, may once again feel reasonably safe. On the other hand, if Britain falls, there will be little time to squander in creating that impregnable defense for this nation for which President Roosevelt has appealed and which the vast majority of public opinion demands.

Mr. Churchill spoke irrefutable truth when he said, in his Sunday speech, "We are fighting by ourselves alone, but we are not fighting for ourselves alone."

Britons are fighting, and dying, today for world-wide democracy and for every man who enjoys, or dreams of, human freedom.

Looms Humming

A dispatch from Rome, Ga., announces that manufacturing plants in the north Georgia industrial region are running at full time and the pay rolls are putting large sums of "fresh money" into circulation.

The same is true, as a motorist will observe, in most of the industrial centers of the Southeast. The windows of textile mills glow all night and the hum of the looms can be heard from the highways.

Much of the revival of industry is attributed to the nation's huge defense program. One concern at Rome is spinning yarn, ultimately to be woven into khaki for uniforms. Another is turning out heavy duck fabric, to become tents and tarpaulins. Still another is preparing to convert its product into gun cotton, basis for high explosives. A company at Rossville is busy on an order for 12,000 army blankets.

A gratifying feature of the business pickup is the reduction of claims for unemployment compensation. Last month the total for Floyd and Chattooga counties was 230 claims. Most folks had rather work for wages than accept "relief."

This revival of demand for army supplies is nothing to be worried about. It does not indicate we're going to war next week or next year—or ever.

It does indicate that the government has been awakened to a realization that the world is all topsy-turvy, that it is well to be ready for what may come.

The great Teddy Roosevelt created a phrase—and he was a famous phrase-maker: "Walk softly and carry a big stick."

If you've ever walked softly in the woods and encountered a venomous snake you've looked around for a big stick. You didn't find one. Rotten branches, broken at a slight blow.

You can't depend upon finding a big stick at hand when you want it. The wise man prepares it before he goes strolling. He chooses it and trims it and seasons it—and hopes he never has to use it.

But it's a good thing to have handy.

The Ghost Ships

There are the ships that lie, day after day, in the harbors of America. Ships that fly the flags of many nations, marooned in neutral ports until the time comes, if ever, when once again they may freely sail the seven seas and contribute their part to the prosperity and the commerce of a world at peace.

They are rusting, these cargo carriers, many of them, and they seem like somnolent tramps, hopeless and resigned to a fate of innocuous desuetude.

But these are not the true ghost ships. The real ghost ships haunt the waters beyond the harbor mouth, invisible save to those whose memory is pricked by imagination.

The true ghost ships are those proud vessels that have been sent, by bomb, torpedo or shell, to an eternal home below the restless waves. These are the ships that inhabitants of the ports remember as gay visitors from other shores. They remember them when they made their maiden voyages, sailing majestically up the harbor of destination to the accompaniment of tooting tugs, screaming sirens and the roar of welcoming planes overhead.

They have gone, so many of them, never to return. And, to those who know the ports of the world, there is no greater tragedy in all the tragedy of the past year than this.

Epitomizing man's triumph over the elements, the ultimate in man's engineering and navigating skill, they have succumbed to man's own Frankenstein monster, war that destroys overnight what it took brains and skill and hard work and courage decades to create.

The ghost ships will haunt the ocean lanes for generations to come, sad symbols of man's folly and man's shame.

To Waste Less

The United States, finally aroused, is going out for preparedness in a big way.

The navy is to be hugely enlarged. Members of the national guard are to be called for training.

It is evident the nation is on its guard. Everybody hopes and trusts that nothing will happen. But after something has happened it is too late to prepare.

It has been pointed out that this is an excellent time for the people of the United States to conserve their food supplies.

Not to eat less or spend less—but to waste less.

Canning factories and packing plants, private and co-operative—are available almost everywhere. They preserve vegetables, fruits, meats. They help to prevent the enormous waste which is an American habit. And housewives have not forgotten the art of putting up jars of food, even though it means standing over a hot stove.

Even the squirrels are wise enough to store away nuts as winter approaches.

Americans have everything to gain and nothing to lose by providing plenty of food-stuffs against what may come.

Not for export to destinations where they might fall into the hands of the Nazi rulers. But for use at home.

First effort toward preparedness of our pioneers was to lay away plenty of food. Napoleon said: "An army marches upon its stomach."

A well-fed people may well be a more patriotic, more loyal people, than one that is half-starved.

Editorial of the Day

FIT TO FIGHT

(From The Newark Sunday Call.)
The nation is repairing its physical defenses. Ships and airplanes and guns are building with frantic speed. But these things will not preserve freedom if there is not also a reconstruction of spiritual defenses.

Totalitarianism does not confine its appeal to empty stomachs. It promises a refuge to those who are disgusted by the pollution of the ballot, the stupidity of parliaments, the timidity of premiers, the thievery of politicians, the greed of labor, the profiteering of capital.

Totalitarianism convinced millions that these evils are inseparable from the democratic system. Most easily convinced were the young people of Europe. It is the young people of America who are most critical of what they see in their own country. Some of them are beginning to ask if our way of life is worth saving.

Those who know that totalitarianism brings a crop of new and greater evils will assure them that the American system is the best yet devised to protect life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. But something more than this assurance is needed if America is to restore the faith of its young.

Selfishness, corruption, materialism and greed in American life must be replaced by devotion, sacrifice and fraternity and a revival of the lofty spirit that wrote the Declaration of Independence. Only if this is done can America's future be made secure.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

PLATFORM AGAINST APPEASEMENT? CHICAGO, July 15.—The fight over the foreign policy plank of the Democratic platform looks, on the surface, just like the other dreary, petty squabbles which seem to be the sole form of diversion available at the Chicago convention. Inwardly, however, the fight has considerable significance. Great issues are involved.

On the one hand the President, while willing to concede a promise to send no troops abroad, wants the platform to include flat declarations in favor of all possible non-warlike aid to England and more important still—against any appeasement of a victorious Germany. A plank meeting the President's wishes was written at the White House before the convention began, and was brought to Chicago by the chairman of the platform committee, Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York. On the other hand, the confessed ambition of Senator Burton K. Wheeler and the men battling with him against the White House forces is to write into the platform such an expression of extreme isolationism that the President will be tempted to throw up his hands and refuse to run.

DIVIDING NEW DEALERS The story of the platform to date is extremely interesting. Moreover, as an indication of what the combined influence of the foreign situation and the third term problem is on the President and the men around him, the question of the foreign policy plank was first raised some weeks ago. At that time Senator Wagner brought word from Capitol Hill that isolationists like Senators Wheeler and Bennett Champ Clark, of Missouri, together with such sufferers from Philadelphia jitters as Senator Sherman Minton, of Indiana, were insisting on a strong "we are the peace party" statement in the platform. The President discussed Wagner's report at some length with Secretary of Commerce Harry L. Hopkins, Secretary of the Interior Harold I. Ickes and other members of the New Deal high command.

In this group, there is the beginning of a division between men like Ickes whose interest in domestic politics is now far less than his concern over the plight of the country and the world, and men like Harry Hopkins, whose preoccupation with domestic politics is so intense that he has not much time to worry about what is really happening. Ickes was opposed to making concessions to Hopkins, who has been living at the White House recently, and has a larger access to the President than any other man, took the opposite tack. The result was a sort of compromise on the platform plank outlined above.

The plank really sought to go in two directions at once, with the promise not to send troops abroad intended to soothe the peace-at-any-price people, and the declarations in favor of aid to England and against appeasement expressing the President's basic policy.

Although the President's willingness to compromise at all bitterly disappointed some of the men around him, the plank was also fairly consistent, being a reiteration of the policy outlined by the President in his address to the nation on the outbreak of war.

The declaration against appeasement, which partly consoled those who opposed compromise, was outweighed in importance all the rest of the plank put together. If Germany wins this summer, there will certainly be a movement to make "a realistic, businesslike deal" to let the Germans have their way in certain areas of South America and in general to have another try at the sort of program that was futile by the fall of Prague. Appeasement was preached at Philadelphia by the forces of Senator Robert A. Taft, and beaten in the person of Wendell L. Willkie. If the anti-appeasement declaration is included in the Democratic platform as eventually approved, both of the major parties will have definitely rejected this insidious and wishful policy.

SYSTEM OF 1936 Just how the platform will come out in the end, no man can say. The President is following the same plan of handling the platform that he used for the Philadelphia convention in 1936, then as now rough drafts including alternative declarations on several subjects and the recommendations of the members of the cabinet or the friends of policy covered by their departments, were prepared in advance at the White House and sent to the convention in Senator Wagner's pocket. Then, as now, there was considerable controversy within the platform committee, the subject troubling the 1936 committeemen being the proper stand to take on the supreme court question.

And, then as now, a kind of drafting committee was gathered at the White House, to examine the changes proposed by the committee in Philadelphia, to work out a final version of the platform, and also to help the President with his address of acceptance. Raymond Moley was a member of the 1936 committee and had his final quarrel with the President during one of its sessions. He and several others have passed out of the picture. But Judge Samuel Rosenman, oldest of the President's amanuenses, is at the President's side today and although friction with Harry Hopkins has lately tended to separate Thomas G. Corcoran from the President, it is reported that he is another member of the group now at the White House.

The unfortunate Wagner and other administration leaders here in Chicago are thus in the middle of a cross-fire between the White House group and the Wheelers, Clarks, et al. It seems inconceivable that the President will permit this sort of thing Wheeler is demanding. He has the delegates to vote Wheeler down. Yet, Wheeler can make quite enough trouble to cause the outcome to be extremely doubtful.

AUGUST AND SEPTEMBER Meanwhile, the problem of foreign policy removes all element of doubt from at least one aspect of the convention. If the President accepts the nomination those who ought to know are unanimous in predicting that he will make no active campaigns. Indeed he cannot attempt an active campaign, and carry on the business of the country at a time when England is likely to go under in August, and England's fall is likely to be followed in September by necessity for armed intervention to prevent Nazi putches in South America. To the few men in Chicago who think about the matter at all, there is a certain irony in the promotion of a third term, to deal with a crisis which is probably coming not after the election, but long before it.

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

They Like

Apple Sauce.

Living on a strictly restricted diet, it became necessary to do some careful selecting when dining in hotels, wayside restaurants, small-town "tea shoppes," etc., on our recent vacation travels.

There are two items of fruit included on said diet. One is prunes and the other apple sauce—or baked apples. Inasmuch as the very sight of a prune causes a revulsion of the temperment, this actually means that my fruit consumption is limited to cooked apples in one of the two forms mentioned.

So, at each meal, I would hopefully inquire as to whether or not they had any apple sauce?

It was at one of those wayside diners on the outskirts of a very small place in Jersey that I asked the question one evening. The cheerless and robust lady operating the place replied:

"My dear sir, in this part of the country it would be about as easy to run an eating place without coffee as without apple sauce. It is a fixture, a standard item, on every plate. Certainly we have apple sauce."

So, I secured a side dish. And now I know what is the staple in Jersey in place of grits in Carolina. It is apple sauce.

Puzzled

Waiters.

I think the waiters in our hotel at New York were perplexed when, at breakfast, I would explain how I wanted a cup of half cream and half hot water, in place of coffee. At least, they looked worried.

And, one morning, when I asked about the apple sauce, the waiter returned and said that it would be delayed about 10 minutes. I ate my eggs and cereal and, soon after, he brought the apple sauce. It was hot and I guess was made on the spur of the moment for my individual benefit.

Cherries,

Sweet, Sour.

The roadside all down the Pennsylvania side of the Hudson river was dotted with signs and shacks.

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Louisiana Ranked Tops

CHICAGO, July 15.—If the Democratic national convention of 1940 had been held a few months ago it would have been unfair to say that it was being conducted under the auspices of the most corrupt local politico-criminal machine in the United States. It would have been unfair to such zealous and accomplished crooks as Dick Leche, then the governor of Louisiana; Professor Jingle-Money Smith, the two-fisted, all-around or decaction thief who was president of the late Huey Long's state university, and to the local and incorrigible Semour Weiss, the political agent and confidante of James A. Farley. The Louisiana mob had set a high standard of larceny and, as long as they lasted, they had a legitimate claim to the national championship. It is possible that in a photo finish they would have run second, but it would not have been fair to count them out arbitrarily, for they were awfully crooked.

But, of course, when a mob of thieves is broken up and its best crooks are sent to prison it automatically loses its standing in the league. That has happened to the New Orleans crooks, and so at the present time there is none to dispute the city government of Chicago, which is the local union, so to speak, of the national Democratic party. This organization is beyond challenge today and, with the ripening of time and historic judgment, may prove to have been the most disgraceful offense against decency and the prestige of popular government in the entire life of the United States.

In Chicago No Such Flaw

In most crooked political organizations there are some departments in which the crime is negligible or non-existent. But in Chicago there is no such flaw. Most of the local courts are beneath a pickpocket's contempt, the school system has been looted, gorillas of the old hooch and prostitution rackets now run labor unions under charters from William Green's A. F. of L., and the underworld is the dominant element of society, with acknowledged rights of representation in the city government.

Details of this corruption have been published repeatedly and it need not be assumed that they have been neglected in the local press. They have been given full, persistent publicity, and the people of Chicago cannot be regarded as innocent dupes who do not know the score. In fact, they keep score, out like the rosters for the home team, take pride in the rising total of civic depravity, including such home runs as the appointment to public office a short time ago of Mr. Frank Zintak, a leading statesman who was tried twice a few years ago on charges of embezzling $10,500 as clerk of the superior court. The jury in the first trial disagreed and one juror subsequently got a year in jail for accepting a bribe to vote for acquittal. The second jury acquitted Mr. Zintak, and subsequent revelations of helling around by night in custody of court bailiffs while the case was on trial led to the conviction of most of these civic peers of Mr. Zintak on charges of contempt.

Mr. Zintak's Testimony

In his defense in that trial Mr. Zintak, in reply to the simple question "whose check was that?" testified as follows: "That's what I say if you would only let me go until tomorrow there would be nothing to it because here is the idea, even if it is on record, you are stirring up something that probably will be worse in the political line than anything, because I represent the largest group of people in Chicago."

"They have all the faith in the world in me for things I done squarely because there was not anything we done in politics that we did not do it in accord with what the people wished. Some people may think there should not be anything like groups, but there will be Polish groups and maybe others as long as we exist for the simple reason that fraternal organizations they encourage youth."

Needing the Polish vote which Mr. Zintak delivers, the mob recently appointed this exemplary Chicago spirit superintendent of construction and betterments at $4,800 a year plus $47 a month for automobile maintenance.

As Mr. Ed Kelly, the mayor, needs Mr. Zintak's Polish vote, as William Green, in the A. F. of L., needs the votes of criminal labor officials, so does the national Democratic party need the support of the Chicago gang, and thus this week the convention meets, unashamed, as the guest of the most loathsome and defiant alliance of crime and politics in the United States at present and possibly in the nation's history.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

"I WISH I WAS IN DIXIE" CONVENTION HALL, CHICAGO, Ill., July 15.—As I write the big clock says five minutes past 1 o'clock. The big console organ, high up on a special gallery, is making the thunder of "Dixie" reverberate through the big hall. The delegations from the south are cheering and waving programs and hats.

The first session of the 1940 Democratic national convention has just ended and the organ is playing them out of the hall.

Down on the first floor, in a section of the press seats, sit two ex-Atlantans directing the music which had to be keyed to cues all through the program. They work with telephones and signal lights.

They are Carter Barron, who once ran with the football for Bill Alexander at Georgia Tech and who now directs the Loew chain of theaters in Washington and the District of Columbia, and Frank Freeman Jr., official of Paramount Pictures and a former Georgia Tech student and football manager.

Hence, it is not at all strange that now, as I write, the music has changed and is playing "Rambling Wreck." The organ is entirely lacking in such tunes as "Glory to Old Georgia," and probably will be. Roosevelt dominates the convention and Georgia Tech the music.

The scene is a stirring one. Thirty thousand persons are on the move. The forest of delegation signs rises high above the thousands of delegates. The motif of the stadium is red. The three tiers of gallery seats are red, and they, with the draped red, white and blue decorations and flags, make it a spectacle of color and humanity.

CHOICE SECTION The Georgia delegation has a choice section, being directly in front of the chairman's stand and in about the center of the floor.

There is not much for the delegations to do but hear the speeches of welcome. Chicago's Mayor Ed Kelly starts off the welcomes by denouncing Wall Street and the Morgans. He also mentions the President and this starts a demonstration. One of the New York delegation grabs a standard and tries to start a parade, but is halted.

WAITING FOR A WORD The convention is waiting for a word. It hasn't much to do until it would like to hear from The Man.

Those who have been to see Harry Hopkins swear he has had no word from The Man in Washington.

Maury Maverick comes by. The former congressman and now mayor of San Antonio stops to say hello. I ask him if he hasn't had a word from Washington. "No," he says, "I haven't heard a word. I went to see Harry Hopkins this morning. I think I can look at Harry and tell when he knows something and won't tell. He didn't know anything this morning."

There is no getting any word from big Jim Farley. By now, everyone knows he is going to retire. Part of it is pique and part of it is business. He hasn't much time to do anything for Jim Farley as long as he heads the Democratic party machinery. He likely would have retired after this election regardless of the nomination. He will retire after the convention if it is a third-term nomination.

At least that is the word. No one can be sure. Tom Stokes, the Atlanta newspaperman who wrote "Chip Off My Shoulder," laughs and suggests that if Farley and Roosevelt are not at political odds there will be more newspapermen falling off limbs than there will be ground for them to fall on. Almost every man here has written that Roosevelt will accept the nomination and that Farley will retire.

The talk runs on that South Carolina's Jimmy Byrnes is out of the running. There is more and more talk of Louis Johnson and Paul McNutt. The biggest headquarters here is that of McNutt. The largest buttons are those of Senator Tydings, of Maryland.

LET'S LOOK AROUND The delegations are picturesque in spots. The Nevada delegation includes four men in western outfits. They look all right in them. Some of the Texans wear chaps and pistols, big hats and loud silk shirts. They do not look as real as the Nevada westerns.

For the most part, though, the delegates look just like delegates. Their ears all are waiting for the word.

A woman from Maryland, wearing two of the big Tydings buttons, and a little tight, comes by to ask for votes for Tydings. The weary newspapermen say they can't vote for anything except shorter distances to the beer and soft drink stands. And for fewer visitors to the press sections who stand about and gawk.

Despite the fact this convention supposedly is cut and dried, there are, according to Jim Farley, more newspapermen, photographers, commentators and radio men here than have ever been at any other previous convention, Republican or Democratic.

Even if Roosevelt is to be nominated, the drama of it will be rather tremendous.

So, all of us wait for the word.

The Only Man Who Can Beat Willkie Is One Who Can Make The People Feel Safe

By ROBERT QUILEN.

The symbol of romantic love may be a heart or the little god Cupid, but the symbol of a happy and contented home is the strong, right arm of a good provider.

The wife and children may not realize how lucky they are, and may not seem to appreciate their good fortune; yet their happiness and contentment do not result from material blessings alone, but from the knowledge deep in their hearts that they are safe—that, come what will, they have a defender to shield and protect them from all evil.

The longing for security is an emotion as old and deep-rooted as fear itself, and man labors for wealth and reputation and power because these are ramparts that make him more safe.

We can understand why the Nazis so gladly surrendered their souls to Hitler. They felt whipped, inferior, insecure, and he offered them pride, glory and safety. And though his methods were those of a gangster, he proved a good provider. He brought home the bacon—notably Denmark's.

The Nazis did not give up freedom to get these benefits. That is the common belief, but there is no truth in it. The Germans, like the peoples in other totalitarian lands, have always been regimented. They prefer that system—the organized group, directed by a boss, instead of the self-reliant independence that has always been typical of America.

Our people, though jealously guarding their freedom, still yearn for security—not the spoon-fed security of pampered mendicants, but the security of self-reliant individuals who do their part on a construction job, content in the knowledge that the head man knows his stuff and will not let them down.

In these times that try men's souls, when our people face immediate and dreadful dangers, they do not lack courage or self-confidence. All they ask is a leader they can trust—a man who is big enough for the job.

This alone is enough to explain the nation-wide and unprecedented clamor for Willkie. To ordinary people, who are sick of politics, he seems another such leader as Roosevelt was in 1933—a man strong and unafraid, who gives them hope and assurance of safety.

The people are crying: "We'll do our part of the job; give us a head man who will do his part."

Tobacco Quota Rules Approved by Wallace

WASHINGTON, July 15.—(P)—Secretary Wallace approved today flue-cured tobacco marketing quota regulations for the 1940-41 marketing year.

Operators of each tobacco farm will receive a marketing card. If the acreage of tobacco harvested does not exceed the acreage allotted, a "within quota card" will be issued for the farm and its production of tobacco can be marketed without penalties. If the acreage harvested exceeds the allotment, an "excess marketing card" will be issued, showing the amount of excess and the amount of tobacco marketed on which a penalty will be collected.

VOTED AGAINST TALMADGE INDORSEMENT.

Editor, Constitution: In your article, "Camp Faction Knocks at Door of Talmadge" of Friday, July 12, quoting a resolution adopted by the Democratic council of Georgia bitterly denouncing Abit Nix, you carried my name as being present at this meeting, and this being true, I wish to defend myself on two positions. First, I opposed the resolution and asked to be recorded as voting against it, and twice before the meeting adjourned was asked to withdraw my objection, which I refused to do. Second, the article tends to lead the people of our state to believe that I, together with a goodly volume of President Roosevelt's friends are for Talmadge for Governor. I want all my friends and acquaintances to know that I can never forget the radio speeches that Talmadge made over the National Broadcasting Company attacking President Roosevelt, condemning the NRA, the CCC, unemployment compensation, old age pensions, and the administration as a whole. Then, to add insult to injury, he criticized the President's physical afflictions.

If the Democrats of our state believe in an "unpardonable sin," then I am sure this was an unpardonable sin, that I can never forget, and I am sure no good Democrats can forget it, and too, Talmadge now says he favors old age pensions—I wonder why the change of mind. Our state legislature passed an "old age pension bill" while he was Governor, and he promptly vetoed it—I haven't forgotten that.

I want the people to know that I will never vote to endorse Talmadge for Governor in the Democratic council, or any other place, as I would consider it a gross insult to the greatest President since George Washington our country has ever had, as well as to all good Democrats. WESTBROOK PEGLER UNFAIR, SAYS WATSON.
Editor, Constitution: In a column of May 31, last, Ex-Guildsman Westbrook Pegler picked up and gave circulation to a statement of American Newspaper Guild dissidents who sought to give the impression that I misused a paid guild office for political purposes in my chairmanship of the Progressive Committee to Rebuild the American Labor Party. It was silly stated that I made almost daily use of the Daily Worker, Communist organ, and that the committee which I head "is the Communist wing of the American Labor Party."

The facts: I am not and never have been on the pay roll of the American Newspaper Guild; I am an officer of the Guild but merely exercise the rights of a citizen in the ALP; Progressive Committee publicly releases were sent to all newspapers in New York, the Times, World-Telegram and other papers receiving word for word the copy sent to the Daily Worker; the charge that the Progressive Committee is Communist was a campaign shibboleth invented by the reactionary forces in the American Labor Party who are trying to control the party and steer it to a pro-war, anti-labor and especially anti-CIO program. I make no apology for my ALP activity, and such activity has been in accordance with the policies and program of the American Newspaper Guild as expressed in convention resolutions on legislation and independent political action for labor.

Pegler ignored the old journalistic admonition to get both sides of the story, and exposed and corrections which had been made by the dissidents themselves. What I have to say about the motives of the dissidents I will say in the forum of the Guild, where democracy has always permitted an encouraged freest expression. The assertions set forth in Pegler's column have been proven untrue to the satisfaction of the Guild membership. A report by Nat Einhorn, executive secretary of the Newspaper Guild of New York, which exposed and denounced the factionalism which Pegler nurtured, was adopted by an overwhelming vote at a membership meeting, not more than half a dozen members voting nay. Moreover, a slate of delegates for the coming Memphis convention put forth by the dissidents was soundly beaten. Pegler did not mention these things.

GET RED CROSS OUT OF HITLER'S FRANCE.

Editor, Constitution: I want to add my voice to that of E. J. Jones. I am not in favor of United States sending food and supplies to any nation which has flopped over to the Nazis. Let the Germans and Italians share their food with the people who are their slaves and let us send our food and supplies to the people of England who are still fighting and dying to keep democracy alive. Get the American Red Cross out of Hitler's France, by protests to your congressmen. Let us not aid Hitler's and Mussolini's death-dealing machine by sending the American taxpayers' money to any country now under their domination. They have taken these countries, now let them feed the people. MRS. BEN TANNER.

Good Morning--By Louie D. Newton

An unnamed nurse, working with the wounded detachments of British soldiers at Dunkirk, had been on constant duty for 38 hours, snatching a cup of coffee now and then. The boats, under the merciful cover of a heavy fog, were clearing away the last units. An officer found this wearied nurse holding two dying men, trying to administer stimulants and keep their hearts beating until surgeons could reach her.

"You are too tired to go on like this," said an officer. "There is room for one more passenger on this boat. Come along."

"Thank you, sir," said the nurse. "I will go on the last boat. As long as there are dying men on this beach, you needn't talk to me about leaving. I'll go on the last boat."

A London newspaper reporter, witnessing this superb example of courage and fidelity, wrote one of the finest stories of the present war, concluding with this sentence: "Where are words to describe such valor?"

The moment I read the story I thought of the words of Jesus, when He said: "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give unto thee the crown of life."

Mind you, He does not say be faithful until death, and He does not say I will give thee life. He says faithful unto death, and I will

Water Bars Speer From Fish Waters

Robert Speer, chief chemist of the city health department, yesterday was torn between two desires.

One was to grow profane and the other to wax poetic.

Recently initiated into the Izaak Walton Club at the city hall, Speer repeatedly has been promised a fishing trip, but just as the party is organized and ready to begin its quest, along comes a rain or a prediction of rains to postpone the venture and bring disappointment.

The latest disappointment occurred over the weekend. A rather disgusted Speer yesterday bemoaned his luck with, "All my fish die aborting." But he added philosophically: "Maybe I'll get as many fish shaking test tubes as if I went along with that gang of novices."

Business Men Invite Clubs' Heads to Camp

C.M.T.C. Members Lonely for Weekly Gatherings and Songs.

Rotarians, Civitans, Kiwanis, Lions, etc., among the businessmen trainees at the CMTC camp at Fort McPherson have got lonesome for the fellowship and off-key singing of the weekly club luncheon.

To make themselves feel better they have received permission from their commanding officers to invite the presidents of the Atlanta civic clubs to be their guests at luncheon on Thursday, and every Thursday after that as long as camp lasts.

Trainee First Sergeant William W. Faw, Gainesville Rotarian, was the man who first thought of the idea, and he announced that he has already had acceptances from Faber Bollinger, of the Kiwanis; Bruce Moran, of Civitan; George Winship, of Rotary, and Bob Hale, of the Lions.

Kiwanis Club in addition is offering prizes to the trainees who excel in various phases of military life. The awards will be made at a special meeting at the end of the 30-day period.

Rain, so far, has prevented a heavy out-door training schedule. The manual of arms has been practiced in barracks, and the rest of it has consisted of watching educational films at the post theater.

Farley Reported Buying Yankees In Two Weeks

Club's Lawyer Says Price Set At $4,000,000

Mahoney States Contract Has Been Submitted to Farley's Attorneys.

By EARL HILLIGAN.
CHICAGO, July 15.—(AP)—Baseball's richest holding—the World's Championship New York Yankees—probably will be sold within two weeks to a syndicate headed by Postmaster General James A. Farley, it was disclosed today by Attorney Jeremiah T. Mahoney, of New York.

CHICAGO, July 15.—(AP)—It looks as though Postmaster General James A. Farley is going to get credit for a fast sports double play—from boxing to politics to baseball.

An announcement said Farley is to head a syndicate which probably would purchase the New York Yankees and consummation of the deal would return the Democratic chieftain to a field in which he long has been a familiar figure.

Farley first won national attention as chairman of the New York Athletic Commission, supervisor of boxing in that state. He became a member of the commission in 1924, was named chairman in 1925 and held the post until 1933, when he was appointed to President Roosevelt's cabinet.

Mahoney, attorney for George Ruppert, brother of the late Colonel Jacob Ruppert, said a contract calling for a price of $4,000,000 has been submitted by the Ruppert estate to Farley's legal representative and added "the transaction has gone from the speculative to the very realistic stage."

The announcement by Mahoney fanned long persistent reports that Farley planned to resign as chairman of the national Democratic committee but the Democratic leader smilingly declined to commit himself when informed of Mahoney's statement.

"As I said this morning," Farley grinned, "that song 'Take Me Out to the Ball Game' that they played this morning at the stadium, sounded all right."

Mahoney, former president of the Amateur Athletic Union and now a director of the Ruppert Brewing Company, explained the projected deal simply, saying "We need money to meet inheritance taxes."

Since the death of Colonel Ruppert at the age of 71 in January, 1939, there has been much speculation on the ultimate ownership of the club and its subsidiaries, which include the Newark team of the International League, and the Kansas City club of the American Association. The New Yankee stadium, home field of the team which has won four straight world championships, is assessed at $2,500,000.

Lance Richbourg Fired as Skipper

FORT PIERCE, Fla., July 15.—(AP)—The Fort Pierce Baseball Club, now in last place in the Florida East Coast League, released Manager Lance Richbourg today and named Pitcher Babe Phelps to replace him.

No reason was given. Richbourg, who formerly played with the Boston National League club, and managed Nashville, had managed the Fort Pierce team since its organization this season.

The veteran Phelps has had class AA league experience.

Bulldogs and Wildcats To Play Night Contest at Sanford Field

Athletic Association To Erect Lighting Equipment in Time for October 26 Game; Tech-Auburn Play Here That Day.

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY.
The Georgia-Kentucky football game scheduled October 26 this fall will be played at night on Sanford field in Athens.

The only catch at present is the Bulldog Athletic Association has no lights or poles or wires or other necessary equipment to erect lights around the stadium. But, according to a member of the association, they will be erected some way or other and the game will be played at night.

For a couple of years Georgia has been trying to raise the necessary funds to erect a modern lighting plant but something always interfered. However, a plan is being worked out now and it is practically certain the lights will go on in time for the Kentucky game.

Jack Dempsey Kayoes Curry In Second Heat

Both Men Fall Out of Ring in Wild Battle at Detroit.

DETROIT, July 15.—(AP)—Former heavyweight boxing champion Jack Dempsey knocked out Bull Curry, Hartford (Conn.) wrestler in the second round of a scheduled six-round exhibition bout here tonight, that was anything but a pugilistic show.

The knockout blow at 1:05 of the round—was a vicious right to the head. Curry was knocked out and the wrestler's stomach and was the only one Dempsey was able to land.

From the time the bell sounded for the first round Curry turned the affair into a wrestling match. He got the ex-champion in a headlock and Referee Sam Hennessy finally broke the two apart.

Thirty seconds before the scheduled end Curry grabbed Dempsey by the legs and both fighters went hurtling through the ropes into the lap of Chairman John Hettche, of the state boxing commission.

Aided by police, Hennessy separated them after they had milled about on the floor.

Curry writhed in agony when Dempsey landed his knockout punch and protested vociferously that he be allowed to continue after being counted out.

He did to the ex-champion's amazement—by going over Dempsey's corner and letting the Old Manassa Mauler have one on the head when his back was turned.

That started another free-for-all which ended in Hennessy and Dempsey kicking Curry out of the ring.

The bout was the second for Dempsey. Recently he scored a knockout over Cowboy Luttrell in Atlanta.

Dempsey weighed 205, Curry 195.

City Net Meet May Last All Summer Here

By CAROLYN MATTHEWS.
Another dripping afternoon cut into the well-intended plans of the city tennis tournament at Northside. This is not rare, of course, we just mentioned it.

The disgusted officials conducting supposed tournament did not seem to mind but they did make a few impatient remarks about jinxes. However, to soothe our feelings they disclosed that such things as dog days and tennis tournaments always come in the summer time, even have a habit of arriving together.

Two of the officials—M. F. Crawford and Molly Williamson—have come to a few conclusions, more or less. They've decided that inasmuch as it's to be an all-summer tournament, everybody might just as well relax. They're convinced they can't do anything about the weather; they're convinced that all the young tennis-players-about-Northside will have to look to another day; they're convinced the finals will get under way some time in October.

So, in view of all this, it is with great reservation and some hope that they again present the day's schedule—to be put into effect when and if the weather permits. The public, by the way, is still invited free to go to the quarter finals.

Star-Studded Field Seeks State Crown

Five Ex-Champs After Yates' Golf Title; Entry Above 135.

By AL SHARP.
Constitution Golf Writer.

IDEAL HOUR COUNTRY CLUB, MACON, GA., July 15.—A champion-studded field will shoot for places in the top division of the Georgia state golf tournament here tomorrow while Dan Yates, defending titleholder, jolls on the porch of the clubhouse, content to take the No. 1 spot without firing a shot.

Five former champions, Charlie Black and Dr. Julius Hughes of Atlanta; Frank Mulherin and Bill Zimmerman, of Augusta, and Johnny Oliver, of Valdosta, will be seeking another crack at the championship.

Dr. Hughes, his left thumb split several weeks ago on a wood-working tool, expects to be a contender this year. But he might be able to control his changed swing well enough to make the grade.

Gene Gaillard, medalist last year at Sea Island, was back from Atlanta getting in a few practice licks. Gaillard's golf shoes and clothes were stolen from his automobile in Brunswick last week and he had to pass up practice.

Swift, of Columbus, whom Yates defeated on the 37th hole last year, will try again.

Those names do not include several who are expected to play a prominent part in the tourney before the finals have been played Saturday.

BLUM AT HOME.

Arnold Blum, who was a member of the University of Georgia golf team last season, will be playing on his home course, and he should be hard to handle.

Then there are Gene Dahlbender, Jr., Jonniner, of the Rome sharpshooter who was runner-up in the Southern Amateur three years ago; Red Roberts, Charlie Dannels, Tommy Barnes, whose brilliant 70 after being four under par to the 12th hole yesterday paced the pack, and others.

That's the tourney and there is a wild scramble of players who are not considered before match play starts is a fact which no one can disregard.

"DARK HORSES" PLENTIFUL.

There's a "dark horse" on every fairway. Listing favorites besides the former champions and those with reputations as tough tournament players is next to impossible.

It will be different in a couple of days after two rounds have set the stage for the quarter-finals and semi-finals on Friday.

Rain interfered with the final day of practice to a limited extent. The hard rain came in late afternoon. Dahlbender shot a 71 in the afternoon to lead the list of low scores today. He had a 74 in the morning.

Two strokes over par at 72 were Jennings, Gordon, Johnny Oliver and Wade Hoyt, the Rome "dark horse."

Red Roberts had a pair of 73's. He has been consistent, 76 topping his efforts.

The rain halted Charlie Dannels and Tommy Barnes.

Flowers, who was in the first round of the district tournament on every fairway, listing favorites besides the former champions and those with reputations as tough tournament players is next to impossible.

Sam Berry Sinks Ace at Fort Mac

Sam Berry, brother of George Berry, who was city junior golf champion last year, made a hole-in-one on the 120-yard No. 3 hole over the Fort MacPherson course yesterday. He used a seven iron.

DOUGHTY DIES.

Ben Brown Never Lost a Fight In Atlanta; Sobel Confident

By THAD HOLT.
Blame it on home-town decisions if you like, the fact remains that Ben Brown has never lost a fight in Atlanta.

The plot thickens because Ben's next local appearance is with the world's champion (in New York and California) Ken Overlin. The bout is scheduled for the ball park Thursday night, August 8.

Sam Sobel was around yesterday. You have to admire the little Mumbler for his refusal to quit on an ungrateful fighter, because he is a loyal, plugging manager who can take the sour with the bitter.

"Now, Brown ain't never dropped one yet in Atlanta," reminded the Mumbler, "and he ain't gonna start now. He's gonna fool everybody and particularly Mr. Overlin. Wait and see."

WAMP SHOOTIN'

by AL SHARP

DOLLY MISSED A LOT OF SHOTS.

IDEAL HOUR COUNTRY CLUB, MACON, GA., July 15.—Gene (Dolly) Dahlbender is probably the finest golf prospect to come up in years.

Certainly he is one of the most colorful. Every place he goes, folks want to see him hit one of his super-colossal tee shots, they want to see him make the recovery shots that mark him as a champion.

Gene is not a champion now, but I am one among many who think he will be in a year or so. Dolly undoubtedly lacks tournament experience. He is not tough enough along those lines to step out and win the national amateur.

At least, I would not go that far on the limb with a prediction. I was thinking about this morning while we were playing. Dolly and I were battling Dynamite Goodloe, the little round man from Valdosta, and Red Roberts, of Dalton.

It may be odd, but when I'm playing a round of golf I pay no attention to the scoring. That probably comes from noticing the scores so much as a spectator. In other words, it's too much like work. Anyway, the score doesn't attract attention unless there is a spurge of birdies.

Well, Dahlbender was missing shots. At least, it seemed he couldn't start the birdies singing, and several times he was having trouble with par.

He was doing all right, understanding his own game against Roberts and Goodloe. But Dahlbender was missing the greens with niblick shots after firing towering drives which carried out of sight.

He was "flapping that turnip," as Dynamite said. But the iron wasn't paying off with nice putts at birdies and easy pars.

To tell the truth, I thought his Southern League American League lies with a fierce twist down the right field line.

It'll Now Rain 40 Days in Row, Legend Says

Weatherman Sees One Rainy Day, Doubtful About Other 39.

Yesterday was St. Swithin's Day, and it rained.

According to legend, if it rains on St. Swithin's Day, it will rain every day thereafter for 40 consecutive days.

George Minding, the weather prognosticator, is not one who takes much stock in this. Surely, he says, some time in past history it must have rained on St. Swithin's Day. Yet it never has rained in Atlanta more than 20 days in succession.

It will rain today, says Minding, because his instruments tell him so. But he doubts very much if it will rain for 39 more days. Who says it will? People who know about St. Swithin? Well, who the dickens was St. Swithin?

St. Swithin, it seems, was an English clergyman who passed away in year 862. He was a man who liked the rain, and he asked that he be buried outside the church at Winchester, where he was bishop, so that the rain from the eaves of the church could drip on the sod above his resting place.

One hundred years later, Bishop Swithin was canonized, was made a saint. And they went to get his bones from their resting place under the eaves and bury them again inside the church. But the story is when they went to dig up St. Swithin that July 15 more than thousand years ago, it rained. As for 40 days thereafter it rained as it must have. Yet it never has had a good soaking before they were under the roof of the church where they never again would be the pater of the rain.

So that's the story. But Minding is still sticking to the legend of St. Swithin. It rained yesterday. There'll be scattered showers today. But tomorrow and tomorrow and tomorrow—who knows?

Foreign Exchange.

NEW YORK, July 15.—The free British pound jumped 15 cents today, buyers pushed the market for the doomed currency.

After July 18 free sterling will be out of the picture as a means of payment for British-empire products.

London announced the week-end plans whereby U. S. banks may open accounts registered by the Bank of England, which in official buying-sellings range of $4.02½-$4.03½ will be the gauge of value.

Free sterling closed at $3.98 and was rising to $3.91 at one time.

What little free sterling is still available was sought by buyers, but it will be sharply limited unless after the July 18 deadline. No more free sterling will be created, however, London warned, and local banking quarters expected the free rate to quietly fade away in time.

The drastic restriction was no surprise, for Britain during the last several months has been in an effort to divert gold from its external trade toward successful prosecution of the war.

The Swiss franc, placed along with the dollar in a favored position in terms of the gold, rose 1/2 cent in terms of the dollar. The Canadian dollar advanced 1/2 cent to 87½¢ U. S. cents.

Quoting rates follow (Great Britain in dollars, others in cents):

German Press Asserts British To Be Crushed

Threat Is Defied by Night-Flying Raiders Over Nazi Areas.

By the Associated Press.

Defiance by Britain, which sent her night-flying raiders ranging far over Germany early today, led German press sources and the controlled German press to the "resigned" conclusion that England must be crushed.

The Germans seized upon Prime Minister Churchill's Sunday declaration of war to victory or to ruin as the factor forcing their decision to aim a mighty blow at the British.

The German opinion contrasted somewhat with that of Italy, the other end of the axis, which forecast that Britain would be given a last chance to fall in line with the Rome-Berlin plan for "renovating" Europe.

One authoritative German commentary even said the bases from Norway down the Atlantic coast already had been set up for the onslaught against England, and Adolf Hitler's newspaper, Volkischer Beobachter, expressed belief that the British would not observe the rules of warfare when the blow falls.

British air raids on Germany last night and early today were not announced by either side, but at least a dozen German and German-held radio stations went suddenly silent, as they do when warplanes approach.

The Germans, on their part, were reported over northeast England late last night, but no bombs were dropped and no gunfire was heard.

R. A. F. raiders also attacked an aircraft factory at Bremen, aircraft stores at Paderborn and Diepholz, oil plants and refineries at Gelsenkirchen, Hamburg and Bremen, and freight yards at Hamm and Soest, the ministry said.

"Fires and explosions resulted and considerable damage was done," the communiqué said.

Two British planes failed to return.

The attackers' bombs also fell on objectives in the old gabled Belgian city of Ghent, setting several oil tanks afire.

(The British admiralty admitted that the submarine Shark, a British submarine, was reported lost during the war, was long overdue and presumed lost, the United Press said. It was understood that the Shark was sunk in the Baltic or off the Norwegian coast. The admiralty said that the British destroyer Escort had been damaged by a torpedo and had foundered in the western Mediterranean.)

A small beleaguered British garrison in Fort Moyalé on the Ethiopia-Kenya frontier withdrew last night under heavy Italian attack, a British communiqué announced in Alexandria.

Gibraltar Bombed.

Confronting the retreating native soldiers and their English officers was 150 miles of desert.

In La Linea, Spain, columns of smoke were seen ascending from the British battle cruiser Hood and aircraft carrier Ark Royal yesterday as bombs from raiding planes fell near their anchorage at Gibraltar.

In Berlin the Nazi high command said the British bombings were "aimless," that only slight property damage was done and that three British planes were shot down.

German air raids yesterday were slight, the British declared. Four persons were killed and 11 injured when bombs fell in southeast England and south Wales.

The Fascist editor said Britain "will have to choose between submission to the renovating, restorative forces of Europe and the extremely grim world war in which inexorable destruction will be measured by days or hours."

His article was regarded as an answer to Prime Minister Churchill's apparent forecast Sunday of a British offensive by 1942. However, the possibility existed that Churchill, in declaring that Britain would fight and would "seek no terms," was rejecting any peace offensive from the Axis even before it came.

The British admiralty in London gave notice that "all vessels navigating within 30 miles of any Italian territory in the Mediterranean will do so at their own risk and peril."

The presumption was that these waters now have been mined by the British.

(One person was killed and several were injured, including an American, when 10 Italian airplanes raided the Haifa area today in the first air attack on Palestine since the United Press in Jerusalem said.)

(J. E. Flannigan, an American employed at an oil refinery, was injured slightly during the raid.)

Elections Held.

Lithuania, with almost a 100 per cent affirmative vote, led Latvia and Estonia Sunday in electing unopposed delegates to new parliaments to carry out Sovietization of the three Baltic states, Rigas sources said.

(The Vatican has formally given its support to the new French totalitarian regime of Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, it was stated in authoritative Vatican quarters last night, the United Press said.)

JOHNS-MANVILLE GAINS.

NEW YORK, July 15.—(P)—Johns-Manville Corporation, for the second 1940 quarter, today reported net income of $1,103,295 after charges, equal after preferred dividend requirements to $1.15 a common share, compared with $1,078,626, or $1.25 a common share in the like 1939 period.

Atlantans Help Destitute Mother

A number of Atlantans who read of the plight of a 40-year-old mother and her four starving children Sunday in The Constitution yesterday had sent donations to Judge Garland M. Watkins at Fulton juvenile court to aid the distressed family, Judge Watkins said.

He is making arrangements for the mother to spend a week or 10 days resting and has promised her that he will help all he can in getting her established. She wants to have a home and get a job to support her own family, she told him.

Judge Watkins said he would see that any contributions made to this family would be spent in rehabilitating the woman and getting her started off again. The four children, all under 15, are being kept at the juvenile detention home temporarily.

Banks Record Marked Gains In Loan Volume

Total of $372,000,000 in 1939 Cited by Economist.

MACON, Ga., July 15.—(P)—Georgia commercial banks report a definite expansion of bank credit in the field of new loans, Dr. Paul F. Cadman, economist for the American Bankers' Association, told bankers studying their business at a special short course at Mercer University today.

"Twenty-four per cent of Georgia's commercial banks made more than 383,000 loans totaling $372,000,000 to business firms and individuals throughout the state during 1939," Dr. Cadman said a survey disclosed.

In the last six months of the year the number of new loans made increased by 2,096 and the dollar volume reached $29,433,075 for new loans, or a gain of 36 per cent over the previous six months, he declared.

The Georgia Bankers' Association sponsored the study courses, including such subjects as installment lending, agricultural credits and customers relations, for a total of 20 lectures.

The King's desire was disclosed here today when it was said he was seeking to arrange an Atlantic crossing with his family and a retinue of about 30.

But if the royal couple and the trio of sisters make another jump in their search for a new home, they will have to go as immigrants. Visitors' visas are no longer issued here for the United States.

Zog, Geraldine and Maxhilde, Rujhi and Myzejen came to London from France on June 27.

Queen Geraldine, whose mother was an American, Mme. Gladys Stewart Girault, formerly of New York, was married to the King in 1934.

Among the wedding presents to the couple were four gilded bronze vases from Benito Mussolini and an automobile from Adolf Hitler.

Senators Wheeler, Democrat, Montana, and McCarran, Democrat, Nevada, took the issue with Clark M. Eichelberger, secretary of the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies, who said that aid to the British should include not only airplanes, guns and destroyers but convoys for food and for child refugees traveling to the western hemisphere.

Both senators declared the conveying of contraband foodstuffs would be an act of war, and would quickly result in the sinking of American warships.

'DRAWBACK' TO DRAWBRIDGE—Eight years ago the New York Central railroad eliminated the draw of its drawbridge at Peekskill, N. Y. Then along came Dottie, a 22-foot cabin cruiser owned by Ray Douglas, of New York. The Douglas family couldn't get out to get their hot dogs and soft drinks at roadside stands. They appealed to the War Department which ruled that the bridge had to be lifted. Yesterday workmen tore up the tracks, lifted the bridge and the Dottie passed. They waited, opened up again and let the Dottie return.

Zog Is Trying To Emigrate to United States

Ex-Albanian Monarch Seeking To Arrange Crossing for Family.

LONDON, July 15.—(P)—King Zog is trying to emigrate to the United States with his beautiful half-American Queen Geraldine, his three sisters and presumably the infant Crown Prince Skander, who was born just before Zog's Kingdom of Albania was taken by Italy last year.

The King's desire was disclosed here today when it was said he was seeking to arrange an Atlantic crossing with his family and a retinue of about 30.

But if the royal couple and the trio of sisters make another jump in their search for a new home, they will have to go as immigrants. Visitors' visas are no longer issued here for the United States.

Zog, Geraldine and Maxhilde, Rujhi and Myzejen came to London from France on June 27.

Queen Geraldine, whose mother was an American, Mme. Gladys Stewart Girault, formerly of New York, was married to the King in 1934.

Among the wedding presents to the couple were four gilded bronze vases from Benito Mussolini and an automobile from Adolf Hitler.

Senators Wheeler, Democrat, Montana, and McCarran, Democrat, Nevada, took the issue with Clark M. Eichelberger, secretary of the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies, who said that aid to the British should include not only airplanes, guns and destroyers but convoys for food and for child refugees traveling to the western hemisphere.

Both senators declared the conveying of contraband foodstuffs would be an act of war, and would quickly result in the sinking of American warships.

Railroad Tears Up Tracks, Opens Bridge for Family's Boat

War Department Backs Father's Demand, Forces Company To Let Vessel Pass So Children Can Get Soda Pop and Sandwiches.

PEEKSKILL, N. Y., July 15.—(P)—It cost the New York Central railroad about $600 and required the removal—twice in one day—of four tons of the road's main line track, but Ray Douglas' youngsters got their soda pop and sandwiches.

Douglas, a New York city building superintendent, owns a nifty 22-foot cabin cruiser named Dottie, which he moors in a nearby inlet at the foot of his summer cottage.

The inlet is on the east side of the Hudson river, while Bear mountain rises from the western bank with plenty of soda stands and eating places.

It seems, however, that Douglas' inlet is blocked at the mouth by a low and long unused drawbridge, over which run some of the New York Central's fastest trains. Until eight years ago, the drawbridge was opened regularly for the benefit of sand barges, but that traffic ceased. So the railroad built solid rails across the bridge, and the Dottie couldn't get under it by a foot at low tide.

South Seeking Rate Reduction For Livestock

Editor Argues Freight Charges Between Sections Discriminatory.

Two Interstate Commerce Commission examiners yesterday heard attorneys from eight southern states appeal for a livestock freight rate parity with other sections of the nation in the first day of a hearing which may take two weeks for complete presentation of testimony.

First of the witnesses to appear on behalf of eight southern public service commissions was Dr. Clarence Poe, editor of the Progressive Farmer, who asserted that present rates "contributed to unbalanced agriculture in the south" and was strangling livestock production in this section.

His stand was countered by a railroad attorney, representing haulers objecting to any change in the rates, who charged that Poe's assertions were "propaganda."

Two-Arm System.
"If the south is to have prosperity," Dr. Poe said, "it must have a two-arm economic system—plant and livestock—with as much income from one as from the other. This will be for the welfare of the nation as well as for our own welfare."

Claiming that discriminatory freight rates aided western livestock-raising and tended to drive the south into a cash crop economic system, Dr. Poe appealed for "equal opportunity" in the south.

H. C. Barron, Chicago attorney for a group of western railroads, contended Poe's testimony was "propaganda" but ICC Examiners A. S. Worthington and T. Leo Haden, of Washington, overruled Barron's motion to strike the statements from the record.

Big Discrimination.
Walter McDonald, chairman of the Georgia Public Service Commission and head of a steering committee which is pushing livestock rate revision, said that the present rates "constituted 150 per cent discrimination against the south."

Dr. Poe's testimony, which was subjected to detailed cross-examination by the railroad attorneys, pointed out that the south has declined steadily in the production of hogs, sheep and cattle because "we can't get landowners interested in this type of work until we can guarantee them a cash market for their surplus animals." The bill of complaint, filed by the public service commissions of eight states, will require about two weeks for hearing in Atlanta. Preliminary hearings already have been held in Washington and at Johnson City, Tenn.

Mrs. Jackson, who is at the Georgia Baptist hospital, and her day-old sons are doing well. She is having difficulty, however, with names for the new arrivals. No names have been selected yet.

The Jacksons have a small farm and the mother said her children were a great help both in the field and in the kitchen. The other brothers and sisters of the four sets of twins are 22-year-old Cenous Jackson Morrow; Mildred, 20; Charles K. 18; Novie, 15; Willie Curtis, 13; Lloyd, 12; Fay, 9.

Young Group Organized To Aid Bond Issue

Organization of the Young Peoples' Civic Association to support the $4,000,000 bond issue for hospitals, schools and fire department improvements was announced last night by John Klein, of 54 East Lake drive, N. E., where the meeting was held.

Klein was named temporary chairman, and permanent officers will be designated at the next meeting to be announced later.

In stressing that the organization is "100 per cent behind the entire bond issue because we realize the great need for the improvements asked," Klein said, the organization composed of 26 charter members, will have a membership of "hundreds" before September 4, the date of the bond election.

"The average age of those attending the meeting was about 25 years," Klein said. "We have started out to sell the bonds to our immediate section, but we are going to ask young people all over the city to organize similar groups and to join us in voting the bonds."

"Most of us at the initial meeting attended Murphy Junior High school and either Boys' High or Tech High schools, and we know just how badly the school improvements are needed. We also have investigated the other items asked and realize those needs."

Watch Stolen Chief Dailey's In 1935 Found; Wife Improved Two Are Held Hospital Says

Man and Woman Under Suspicion of Larceny in Case.

"Who owns the watch?" a simple enough question, yesterday had city detectives perplexed, three persons claiming the watch in question, and two Negroes in jail on charges of suspicion of larceny. The story, according to Detectives L. T. Ballard and M. W. Moss, began in 1935 when Mrs. W. Brooks McCrory, of 1744 Irwin street, S. W., reported theft of a jeweled wrist watch valued at $90. It was never found, and Mrs. McCrory soon forgot all about it.

But yesterday, Detectives Moss and Ballard were ordered to investigate a fight between two Negro women. They were quarrelling over—a watch.

One of them, listed as the wife of Bose Long, of a Linden street address, claimed that her antagonist, Mary Franklin, had stolen her watch. She told police her husband had given it to her in 1935.

Detectives took the watch, checked up at headquarters. You've guessed it, it belonged to Mrs. McCrory.

So now, Bose Long is in jail charged with suspicion of larceny of the watch from Mrs. McCrory. And Mary Franklin is in jail charged with suspicion of larceny of the watch from Bose Long's wife.

And the watch: It's still at headquarters.

Glenn Advises Piping Water From the Hills

Sees Amicocola as Future Source for Atlanta; Favors New Plan.

If Atlanta is to insure its future water supply, it should begin now to plan piping water down from the Amicocola river in the north Georgia hills, T. K. Glenn, prominent banker and chairman of the Grady hospital board of trustees, declared yesterday.

He advanced this idea in endorsing the proposal of Ed Almond, chairman of the county commission, that a metropolitan water and sewer system be created to handle the water and sewer service for Atlanta and Fulton and DeKalb counties and all the suburbs.

Glenn's view was opposed by James L. Wells, paper company executive and a member of the Grady board of trustees.

Wells said that the city system should be maintained and that from the "business man's viewpoint," the water rate charged now is a fair one.

Glenn said that as far back as the War Between the States it had been known that water will flow from the Amicocola river to Atlanta by gravity and he urged that now is the time for the metropolitan area to band itself together to put through this project.

He declared it is only logical that the water and sewer systems of the city and counties and suburbs be combined to give a uniform water and sewer rate. Such a combination would bring added comforts to all those residing in the metropolitan district, he said.

Wallace Sees Crop Control Plank Adoption

Agriculture Head Silent on Buying Hemisphere Surpluses.

CHICAGO, July 15.—(P)—Secretary Wallace said today he expected the Democratic party's platform committee to agree upon a farm plank endorsing the Agriculture Department's crop control programs, but remaining silent on proposals to extend phases of those programs to the western hemisphere.

A suggestion advanced by administration leaders in Washington recently that the United States buy up surplus farm products of the Americas and dispose of them abroad was being discussed among delegates from some middle and far western states.

This proposal was designed to strengthen the western hemisphere in economic dealings with Europe's totalitarian governments when peace comes.

Wallace said he understood that there was "some opposition" to the project among farmers. At a national conference in Washington last week, state Agricultural Adjustment Administration committee men expressed fear that purchase of Latin and South American farm surpluses by this country might interfere with domestic programs and prices.

This same apprehension was expressed by some agriculturally-minded delegates and party leaders.

Wallace is a strong advocate of western hemisphere economic unity, but he has indicated that he is not enthusiastic over the surplus-purchase idea.

The secretary said a platform committee pledging the party to sharp expansion of present programs of distributing domestic crop surpluses among needy families in this country.

Margaret Stovall Receives Valued Gifts From England

• • • MARGARET STOVALL had one of those rare and real thrills of a lifetime the other day when she received a package from far-away Highgate, a suburb of London, England. It was sent by one of her close friends, Mrs. Flora Woolnough, a gracious English lady. In the package was a lengthy article, clipped from the London Times of June 2, which concerned the centenary celebration of the birth of Margaret's kinsman, Sir Thomas Hardy. Also contained in the package was an old print, dated December 20, 1835, and which was published in the Petit Courrier des Dames.

As a Christmas present last year, Mrs. Woolnough had sent the Atlantic a companion print to the one just received. She wrote that while browsing around in an old book stall in Highgate she had discovered the second one. And in the midst of the terrors of war, she generously and unselfishly found time to send this quaint and valued gift to Margaret.

A year or so ago Mrs. Woolnough presented to the British Museum a handsome set of Crown Derby china that had belonged to her grandparents. It was placed in a special case by museum authorities and forms a valuable addition to the recently added Edward VIII wing.

Mrs. Woolnough, by the way, with her daughter, Madge, lives in a charming house on Stormont road in Highgate. The house, according to Margaret, is filled with exquisite heirlooms—china, silver, inlaid furniture and paintings. One of her delightful summer customs is serving tea and luscious English strawberries to her friends beneath the rose-covered trellises in her beautiful garden.

• • • JUDY KING never fails to come off "tops" in any sporting venture in which she chooses to participate. So it isn't at all surprising to learn that this feminine follower of Isaac Walton landed a 378-pound marlin off Cat Cay, near Bimini, Nassau, the other day. Judy, along with Kate Hodgson and Mary Fisher, of Detroit, has been enjoying a short stay at this famed pleasure resort.

The trio will fly today to Lexington, Ky., where they will witness one of the country's outstanding annual horse shows. Mary, incidentally, will show some of her handsome, blooded horses. Needless to say, the threesome will be included in the numerous social affairs attendant upon the ring events.

At the termination of the show, they will go to Sea Island to reopen Judy's lovely beach home, which is one of the island's show places.

• • • WHEN Catherine West becomes Mrs. Murray Hubbard this morning, she will carry an exquisite imported lace handkerchief which carries an unusual amount of sentiment. The handkerchief belongs to Mrs. T. A. Methvin, of East Lake Wier, Fla., and it has been carried by four close friends of today's bride, on the occasions of their marriages.

First and foremost was Catherine's sister, the late Mrs. A. P. McCallie, who was Frances West. The other brides were Mrs. Mangham Bolin, the former Marie McCuen; the former Jane Zuber, who is now Mrs. James Daniel, of Greenville, S. C., and her twin sister, Mrs. Dell Woods, of Panama City, Fla., who was Babs Zuber.

The handkerchief will be the "something old" and the "something borrowed" in the bridal ensemble selected by Catherine, and the "something new" will be her becoming dress. The "something blue" will be some lingerie which was made by Catherine for Mrs. Enos Hartman when, as Katherine Harris, she became a bride.

• • • A PATRIOTIC service to the city will be rendered with proceeds accruing from the game party to be given today at Wingfield, the Peachtree road home of former Governor and Mrs. John M. Slaton. Sponsors for the affair are members of the Atlanta Ladies' Memorial Association, of which Mrs. A. McD. Wilson Jr. is president, and through this group work will be continued in memory of the men who fought in the War Between the States, with the marking of the graves in Oakland cemetery as one of the foremost projects.

From the record books of the association, 900 graves have been identified by the association, co-operating with the city in the project started three years ago. Gray markers for the Confederate and blue for the Union dead have been placed on 750 graves by this group, an affiliate of the Confederate Southern Memorial Association, which began in 1864 at Columbus, Ga., as aid society for the wounded, and developed down the years into a memorial association throughout the south.

Announcement is made today by Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Booth Porter of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Jean Porter, of New York city, formerly of Atlanta, to Edwin Townsend Wroth, of Hagerstown, Md. The marriage of this popular couple will be solemnized at high noon on September 7 at the Church of the Transfiguration in New York. The bride-elect attended North Avenue Presbyterian school and graduated from Swarthmore College, Swarthmore, Pa. She later studied at Columbia University and for the past year she has been residing in New York. Mr. Wroth is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Peregrine Wroth, of Hagerstown, Md. He attended St. James School and Trinity College. The couple will reside in New York city.

Camp Fire Girls at Toccoa Enjoy Out-of-Camp Trips

The Camp Fire Girls at Camp Toccoa enjoyed the second out-of-camp trip of the season last week when they motored by truck to Lakemont, returning to camp in time for taps. The occupants of cabin two, with Sara Lytle, of East Lake Weir, traveled to Cool Springs, about 10 miles from camp, for supper.

Keona Village, the part of camp for the older girls, recently entertained the entire camp at a Little Abner night. A genuine jug band provided the music for square dancing. Each village in camp presented a stunt, with Keona giving an old-fashioned melodrama, "Little Nell." Sadie Hawkins Day and other Little Abner pastimes completed the evening.

Brazilian night was celebrated by Keona Village for Yoki, with the entertainment being conducted by Helen Hardee, from Araxa, Minas, Brazil. The evening was begun by setting out on a trip from the United States to Brazil, with pictures of the boat, the ocean, the initiation at the equator, and the harbor at Rio de Janeiro. Miss Hardee told a Brazilian snake story and showed pictures of the interior of Brazil.

All this—and more—I learn from Hurrell, Hollywood's glamor photographer, when I go to have my picture "look" at Warners, where the 36-year-old wizard of the lens receives $750 a week to bulb actors and actresses.

This is Paul Muni's usual entrance remark: "I've only got 15 minutes to give you. And don't forget—no retouching of the proofs. I want every line in my face kept in."

Ann Sheridan insists on lying down when she's being photographed. This is because, according to Hurrell, "Annie likes to relax. Bette Davis, on the other hand, refuses to recline. She feels more at ease while standing. Bette is a nervous extrovert."

So is Jeffrey Lynn. "You can't get him to keep still. He's always fixing his hair, the set of his suit, fingering his tie, and asking 'Where should I look?'"

Hurrell's experiences with the one and only Greta Garbo prove that she laughed long before "Ninotchka." "She's a strange person," says Hurrell. "Not very conversational. But once when I was jumping about—it's my way of making them forget the camera—she laughed and said to me, 'You are a very funny man.'"

Norma Shearer has been the hardest of all Hurrell's clients to photograph well. "She'd come in with a train of wardrobe girls, hairdressers, and mirrors to pose in front of. Then she'd go into a terrific pose. If you notice, in all her stills she has an artificial look."

Here's what happened when Errol Flynn had to clinch with Brenda Marshall for some love scenes to advertise their "Sea Hawk." The expression of disdain on Brenda's face was too much for Errol, who grabbed her and rubbed his cheek against hers (the said cheek with a two-days' growth of beard on it). Brenda jumped away wrathfully. (Loud laughter from Mr. Flynn.)

When Rosalind Russell poses alone—"The nearer you make her look to 16, the more she likes the finished result. She insists on being glorified. Her face is so intelligent, however, that it's hard to glamorize her." . . . As for Jimmy Stewart's solo photographic antics—"He's very gentle, very shy, and mopes around with no comments."

Jimmy has done wonders for the photogenicity of Olivia de Havilland. "Or maybe it's a coincidence," says Hurrell. "Anyway, since Olivia has known Jimmy she's a new person. She's just floating on air. She's bubbling; she's emotional. She used to be so indifferent when she came for her sittings. You couldn't tell whether she was sick or tired. And that made her hard to photograph. When they come in indifferent, you might as well lock up shop."

Supplementary Energy Yielding Diet Is Adjusted to Fit the Individual Needs

By Ida Jean Kain.

MY DAY: Too Late To Mobilize After War Comes

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

CHAUTAUQUA, Ohio.—Here it is Sunday morning and we are speeding through peaceful, pleasant American countryside. We passed a village a few minutes ago with people going to church, and now a golf course dotted with players. Along a country road, several young people on bicycles with packs strapped on the handlebars, are off, I imagine, for a day's picnic and swim in some clear pool.

Thank God, these things can still be for us. Yesterday I had a ride and swim in the morning, and Mrs. Florence Kerr, head of the women's and professional projects in WPA, brought her regional area supervisors for a picnic lunch. We sat in the sun on the lawn and I heard reports of the work being carried on in different parts of the country. We discussed at some length the relationship of much of the training which is going on under WPA to the emergency situation created by the need for national defense.

I have recently been looking over a pamphlet called "If War Comes," by Day Plan. What Your Government Plans for You," by Donald Edward Keyhoe. It is very interesting, though the War Department says nothing of the kind has been worked out in such detail and, so far as they are concerned, the whole thing is still in the realm of discussion.

My main objection to this plan is that, while the publication of such a plan may be of value in arousing the United States to the realization of the possibility of some day having to defend its own shores, the plan does not make clear that it is too late to undertake such mobilization when there is an attack.

Mobilization, if it is going to have any different effect, must be perfected long before there is a war in which we can take any part. Our only hope of keeping the peace which we so prize is to prove before there is any involvement in war, that we are a unified nation for defense, mobilized that each and every one of us know what job to do, how and where to do it. Therein lies the one hope for peace.

In the evening a party of us went up for dinner to the Norrie Park Point Inn restaurant. The sunset and glow reflected into the water. It was a beautiful and calm sight. We sat out on the terrace and someone pointed up in the air when an airplane was flying down the river, apparently almost touching the moon.

A man, in what looked like a Tyrolean costume, played his accordion. Some of the songs I have heard in European countries in happier days. For a moment I almost thought we were looking at some less familiar scene than the Hudson river which I have known since childhood.

The one time in a woman's life when a protective diet is of the utmost importance is when she is going to have a baby. But the old adage "eating for two" applies only to the protective foods, not to the carbohydrates and fats. It isn't a reserve of energy foods, or stored fat, that makes for healthier babies, but an abundant reserve of the protective building materials.

So the mother who indulges in rich desserts, sweets and all types of fattening foods with the comforting thought that she is "eating for two" or that the pounds won't show anyway, is on the wrong track. She is not necessarily furnishing the needed building materials, and is certainly running the risk of gaining too much weight.

There is an excellent article, "Diet in Pregnancy and Lactation," by Dr. Carl R. Wegner, in the June issue of the Journal of the American Dietetic Association. Dr. Wegner makes it clear that the process is one of biologic precision in which each element required is called for when and as often as needed. The mother's body is a storehouse of reserve material and the problem of diet in pregnancy resolves itself into supplying adequate protective elements for her own use, plus a reserve for building material for the baby.

The extra building material needed is supplied by milk, eggs, cheese, lean meat, fruits, vegetables and whole grain breads and cereals; or, in effect, the foods which furnish vitamins, minerals and complete protein. To this protective list can be added the fuel foods in accordance with individual needs.

Since one common complication of pregnancy is an excessive gain in weight, Dr. Wegner has divided the dietary requirements for the pregnant woman into two parts—the daily minimal protective diet, and the second part into the energy yielding portion. Here are the two dietary plans:

Daily Minimal Protective Diet.
	Calories
1 quart of whole milk—as beverage or used in cooking	650
1 egg	70
1 serving of lean meat	150
3 servings raw vegetables, lettuce, celery, tomato, cabbage, carrots, etc., without sugar or oily dressing	75
3 servings of cooked vegetables: green beans, carrots, greens, spinach, etc., without fat	150
3 servings of fruit (one-half to be uncooked). Oranges, grapefruit, pineapple, peaches, lemons, apples, berries, etc., without sugar or	200
2 slices of whole grain bread, or one and a half ounces of whole grain cereal	120
1 square butter, 1-2-inch thick	160
	1515

Supplementary Energy Yielding Diet.
2 squares butter	200
4 slices whole grain bread	240
1 serving cheese, eggs or meat	150
2 servings potatoes, rice or macaroni	200
Sugar and cooking fat	200
1 dessert, pudding, ice cream, cake, etc.	200

By dividing the diet into two parts, the protective portion can remain unaltered, while the supplementary part can be adjusted to fit the individual needs. So the expectant mother who gains too much weight can restrict some of the calories in the energy yielding part of the diet. She could practically eliminate the last 600 calories in the supplementary diet and restrict the servings of butter, bread and eggs and meat. But the minimal protective diet should not be altered in quantity or quality.

And unless the expectant mother has several hours of a day of exposure to direct sunlight, 800 U. S. P. units of vitamin D must be taken daily. This is extremely important as vitamin D is essential to the utilization of calcium and phosphorus.

Since pregnancy is a period of growth, the diet must be abundantly rich in all growth promoting elements, but it is not necessary that there be a marked increase in the total energy value of the expectant mother's diet.

Tomorrow's article by Ida Jean Kain explains the specific dietary needs of the expectant mother.

Woman's Quiz

Q. Is it true that the faster a child grows the more sleep he should have? How much sleep should a child of three have? How much should an active child of 12 and an adolescent of 16?

A. Studies made by the United States Children's Bureau indicate that a child grows most when asleep. A baby, less than a year old, grows very fast and sleeps most of the time. When he gets a little older he does not grow as fast and therefore does not need so much sleep. After about a dozen years, when the child enters the adolescent stage, growth speeds up again and the older boy or girl needs even more sleep than one a year or two younger. Many parents do not know this, and permit older children to stay up later than younger ones with the result that boys and girls of 13 to 16 are often listless and inert. They may be sluggish and tired most of the time, or moody and irritable. A child of three should have 13 to 15 hours sleep, a child of 12 should have 10 to 11 hours and an adolescent should have 10 to 12 hours. If the child has firm muscles, erect posture, rosy skin, clear eyes, a good appetite and a happy disposition, he is undoubtedly getting enough sleep.

Human Beings Dependent Upon Contact With Others

By Caroline Chatfield.

So you think you are self-sufficient, do you? You're giving yourself a bum steer. The truth is we human beings are utterly dependent upon our contacts with other human beings. We run down as unwound clocks when we lose touch with people. We have to check with those who think more, know more and have more to get the stimulation we need. We have to check with those who think less, know less and have less to avoid the pit of self-pity. In the same way that competition is the life of trade, so constant comparison of ourselves with others is the key that winds up our mental clocks and keeps them running.

Your businessman knows this. The big stores employ shoppers to make the rounds of other stores in the neighborhood, to see what they offer, how they display it, what they ask for it and how quickly they turn over their goods. The merchants want to know what they are competing with, how well they are competing and they find out by comparisons.

Watch the woman that lives alone, stays at home, never going about to see how others live. Before long she yields to the temptation to let her housekeeping go at sixes and sevens. If nobody ever comes in to sit in her living room there will be dust on the furniture, cobwebs in the corners, limp curtains at the windows and other evidences of neglect. If nobody ever comes in to have a meal with her she soon degenerates into an eater-out-of-cans, or a lopper-out-of-pots. She reverts to the primitive just as fast and just as far as modern conditions permit.

Isolation from people is quite as disastrous to the house of the mind. It is not a well kept house if there are no outside contacts. Alone, habitually, we think our own thoughts, generally inverted thoughts. If we don't swap ideas with others, nor sharpen our wits against others' wits, our mental processes become sluggish, slow down and stop. The printed page and radio may keep us from staleness for a time, after a fashion, but they are poor substitutes for the warm, vital interchanges with flesh and blood people.

Our world is as big and broad as the people we make contact with. Our world widens or shrinks as the number of our acquaintances multiplies or diminishes. Our horizons are heightened or lowered by our reaching out in the give and take with friends and acquaintances.

'Chronic' Patient Will Try His Own Remedies First

By Dr. William Brady.

Because it is difficult to define or give a precise name to the incipient or earliest stage of most of the serious chronic diseases, which terminate the careers of a majority of adults, the general laity and the rank and file of the medical profession are just plain dumb about dealing with such disease.

Chronic illness is illness of slow development and long duration. Acute illness is illness of sudden onset or rapid development, with a short course, perhaps a crisis and a quick end one way or the other.

In the first place the individual developing a chronic disease almost invariably accepts advice from friend or stranger irrespective of the friend's qualifications to give advice or the stranger's motives for offering it, and monkeys with some kind of self-treatment for a considerable time before it even occurs to him or her to squander money on a medical examination. Does the gullible victim choose to call his ailment "cold," "indigestion," "nervous exhaustion," "auto-intoxication," "poor circulation," "insomnia," "catarrhal trouble," "neuritis," "rheumatism," "anemia"? No matter, even if he never discusses his symptoms with friend or stranger, unless he is blind and deaf he can scarcely remain within sight or sound of civilization and escape repeated suggestion of one or more remedies or cures for his complaint.

The dumbness of the medical profession in regard to dealing with disease at its inception is evident in the circumstance that, among the dozen or more fields recognized in the profession as legitimate specialties prophylaxis or preventive medicine has not yet been accorded the dignity. If you

Apple Pies Bring Back Memories

By Sally Saver.

Green apple pie! What memories those words stir. In barefoot days as summertime rolled 'round certain pleasantly familiar activities engaged the attention of our household. Small, fragrant summer apples were peeled for plate or deep-dish pies and peelings and too-small apples were carefully saved for jelly-making. Looking about us now we see these same "apple-green" apples and small rosy-cheeked ones, and it was time once again for summer apple pies and other apple dishes. Here are some old-fashioned ones you will love.

Deep-Dish Apple Pie.

5 cups peeled and sliced cooking apples
3-4 cup granulated sugar
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons butter or margarine.

Plain pastry.
Place apples in casserole. Sprinkle with sugar, dot with butter, then cover with pastry. Press edges firmly to casserole, using tines of fork or fingers. Make several gashes in the top. Bake in a 425 degree oven for 30 minutes, or until apples are tender. Serve with cream or hard sauce.

"Green" Apple Pie.

8 tart "green" apples of medium size, peeled and sliced
1-2 cups sugar
2 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons butter or margarine.

Plain pastry.
Add sugar, mixed with flour to apples and mix well before pouring into the bottom, unbaked crust. Dot mixture with butter, cover with plain or lattice crust and bake in 450 degree oven for 15 minutes; then decrease heat to 350, and bake for another 15 or 20 minutes. To insure a flaky crust, be very thorough in the water added to pastry mixture and handle pastry as lightly and as little as possible.

Sharp grated cheese added to pastry at the time shortening is combined with flour gives grand flavor to apple pie. Or apple pie may be made with apple sauce, made from these tart green apples, placed in a baked pastry shell. This pie should be topped with grated cheese.

Miss Louise Binns Weds Mr. Farmer

The beautiful home of Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Arnold, on Briarcliff circle, was the scene of the wedding on July 7, of Miss Louise Binns and Edwin B. Farmer. The ceremony, at twilight, was performed by Rev. J. Lee Allgood, pastor of St. Paul's Methodist church, in the presence of a large company of friends and relatives.

Preceding the ceremony, Mrs. Lawrence Gifford sang "Because." The bride party entered to the strains of the "Bridal Chorus" from "Lohengrin," sung by a chorus composed of close friends of the bride including Mrs. Eddie England, Mrs. Charles Hubbard, Mrs. J. L. Norton, Mrs. Robert Castleberry, Mrs. Bernard South, Eddie England, Charles Hubbard, Robert Castleberry, Bernard South and Dr. Claud Battle.

Throughout the home the rooms were adorned with quantities of pink roses, fern and summer flowers in shades of pink.

In the drawing room, where the ceremony was performed, a profusion of roses, formed the effective background for the bride party.

Miss Helen Morris, niece of the bride, was junior bridesmaid and only attendant. She wore a gown of white lace, featuring a full skirt, floor length and a tight bodice, with short puffed sleeves. Her bouquet was of white roses.

The bride descended the graceful circular staircase with Dr. Arnold, who gave her in marriage, and they were met at the altar by the groom and his best man, W. J. Eldredge. The bride was lovely in a gown of white lace and net, over taffeta. The bodice combined bands of the lace with the net, and featured short puffed sleeves and a sweetheart neckline. The billowy skirt of the net was made very full, and was also trimmed with inserts of the lace. Her bouquet was of gardenias.

Dr. and Mrs. Arnold entertained at a reception honoring the bride couple.

The table in the dining room was covered with a handsome cut-work and lace cloth, and had as a centerpiece a crystal bowl of pink roses, larkspur and fern. Crystal candlesticks held pink tapers, and the mints and ices were in pink and green. A crystal bowl of the same flowers adorned the buffet.

Misses Kate and Mary Binns poured coffee and assisting in entertaining was Mrs. William Oliver. Punch was served by Miss Mildred Morris and Mrs. Curtis Reid. The punch bowl was embedded in a mound of vari-colored summer flowers and greenery.

Later in the evening, Mr. and Mrs. Farmer departed for a short wedding trip the destination of which was not revealed, and upon their return they will reside in Atlanta. The bride wore for traveling a gown of navy blue, with all accessories in white.

Miss Baugh Weds E. L. Clinkscales

The marriage of Miss Dorothy Lamar Baugh to Edward L. Clinkscales was quietly solemnized Sunday afternoon at the Morning-side Baptist church, with Dr. G. J. Davis officiating in the presence of the families and a few close friends. Mrs. Henry J. Graf presented the nuptial music.

The bride's attendants were her sister, Mrs. Glen E. Leathers Jr., and Mrs. Felton T. Knight. They were gowned alike in afternoon models of dusty rose silk jersey and carried nosegays of vari-colored flowers.

Wilbur J. Ellison was best man for the groom and J. T. Goen acted as the groomsman.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, T. T. Baugh, was becomingly attired in an afternoon gown of white silk jersey with which she wore an off-the-face hat of white straw fashioned with a wide, pleated brim. She carried a white prayer book adorned with a cluster of orchids.

Mrs. T. T. Baugh, the bride's mother, was gowned in a model of yellow georgette with a shoulder spray of carnations and baby's breath. Mrs. E. G. Clinkscales, mother of the groom, wore a gown of dusty rose lace and a shoulder bouquet of pastel-shaded sweet peas.

Immediately after the ceremony, the young couple left for a motor trip to New Orleans. Upon their return they will reside in St. Petersburg, Fla., where the groom holds a responsible position with the Western Union Telegraph Company.

Baptists Raise $17,427 For British Church

Funds To Aid Missions Cut Off From Funds in England.

Reports received yesterday by Dr. Louie D. Newton, secretary of the Baptist world emergency committee of the Southern Baptist Convention, from 66 churches in 12 states and the District of Columbia, show gifts made Sunday, July 14, to the British Baptist mission fund, amounting to $17,427.20.

These first reported gifts will form the nucleus of the goal of $200,000 which Southern Baptists are undertaking to raise during July to care for the 433 foreign missionaries of the historic British Baptist Mission Society, cut off from their source of supply in England because of the restrictions of the British government due to the war.

Appeal Sent to United States. An appeal was sent to the Baptists of the United States a few weeks ago by the British Baptist Mission Society that the Baptists of this country come to the aid of their foreign missionaries in their dire distress at this time when no money can be raised or sent out of England. The Northern Baptist Convention, in its recent session at Atlantic City, and the Southern Baptist Convention, in its recent session at Baltimore, voted unanimously to accept this responsibility.

Dr. George W. Truett, pastor of the First Baptist church, Dallas, Tex., was named chairman of the Baptist world emergency committee to raise funds to meet this and other emergency appeals that might come to Southern Baptists during the war. Dr. Newton was named secretary of the committee, which is composed of 25 leading Baptists throughout the south.

Georgia Is Leader. Georgia leads the states represented in the reports received on last Sunday's gifts, with a total of $5,446.54. Texas is second with $2,924.50, and Virginia is third with $2,396.35. With a total of 25,000 churches to be heard from, the committee is confident that the total amount of $200,000 will be in hand by the end of July. The money will be sent through the foreign mission board of the Southern Baptist Convention direct to the British Baptist mission stations.

The Georgia churches represented in the report of last Sunday's offerings and the amounts given follow: American First Church, $69.07; Atlanta Baptist Tabernacle, $250; Atlanta Tabernacle, $23.80; Capitol View, Atlanta, $100; Atlanta Druid Hills, $1,000; Atlanta Euclid Avenue, $26; Atlanta Euclid, $100; Atlanta Morningside, $41; Atlanta Oakdale, $40; Atlanta Second-Ponce de Leon, $34.24; Atlanta Way, $338.85; Augusta First Church, $120; Buford First Church, $50.05; Columbus First Church, $600; East Point Church, $60; Gainesville First Church, $371; Hapeville First Church, $40; Macon First Church, $400; Macon Tattall Square, $200; Vidalia First Church, $133; Waynesville First Church, $125; Georgia B. # THE MORTAL STORM

Olaf and Fritz Take Freya Home...
Her Father Gives Her a Sleeping Powder

By PHYLLIS BOTTOME.

SYNOPSIS.
The coming of the Nazi regime to Germany has brought Freya Roth, brilliant young medical student, the first unhappiness she has ever known. In love with young Hans Breiter, a Communist, she accompanies him to his mountain home when he flees the Nazis after the Reichstag has been burned. She spends the night with him, and is received by Hans' kindly peasant family as his wife. When, the next morning, Hans starts on his dangerous journey across the border to Austria and safety, Freya insists on accompanying him and his brother Karl and their friend, Seppel Neuner. Hans is just safely over the border, when a shot rings out. Freya, running forward, finds her lover lying in the snow—dead. Two men in brown shirts stand over him. As she stares, horror-stricken, there appear her Nazi stepbrother, Olaf von Roth, and her aristocratic admirer, Fritz Maehrg, both in Nazi uniform. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

The fact could pass in her mind for a mere nightmare, and she thought that she might wake up from one of her cruel sleeps and find that nothing had happened. But when she had been awake for a minute or two, Freya found that the return of hope was horrible, and that it was better to be conscious all the time that Hans was dead.

When Olaf opened the door, Freya saw her mother standing in the hall, as if she were waiting for her. She stretched out her arms and Freya fell forward into them, without a sound.

Her mother asked no questions, she drew Freya upstairs to her room and undressed her, as if she were a child again.

When they were alone, Freya grasped her mother by the arm, and demanded accusingly: "Why? Why? Why? They came too late to save him! Couldn't the boys have come sooner?"

"The boys?" her mother asked in puzzled tones.

"Olaf and Fritz," Freya explained impatiently. "They brought me back just now, didn't you notice them? Mother—they were too late! That was what was so horrible!"

Her mother stooped to take Freya's shoes off, and whispered: "Yes—horrible! Horrible!"

"Mummy," Freya went on, "it wasn't because I would go with Hans—when they all wanted me not to—was it? Frau Breiter and Karl and Seppel? They can't think that—can they? I didn't once look back at the rocks! When I heard the shots, I ran towards them, for I knew! But I never looked back! I think they must have got home safely! Only we mustn't say that seems so silly, doesn't it?—not to ask Olaf, when he has always helped me! The Breiters are our own people—not enemies! Can't anyone explain it to Hitler? Hans was a good German! and he had never done anyone any harm! Oh, mother! Mother! It wasn't because I went with him—was it—that the Brown Shirts came?"

"I don't think, darling, that it had anything to do with you," her mother said slowly, lifting her steady eyes to Freya's wild ones. "Get into bed now, and I will bring your father to sit with you for a little! The burning of the Reichstag was what gave an excuse to the Nazis to attack Communists, and to kill anyone whom they thought was trying to escape. I am sure that your being with Hans had nothing to do with it!"

Her mother folded her clothes, and brought her a hot drink; and then her father came into the room, and put something in the tank to make her sleep.

Freya took his hand in hers, and held it fast. He sat down on the bed, beside her, without speaking, and Freya, seeing her own grief in his eyes, told him everything, except what she and Hans had been to each other; this she could not tell him, because for the moment, she had forgotten it.

"I don't see why I should go on living without him," Freya asserted, "do you? It would be too lonely! Such things need not be. Death is nothing to be afraid of, and all the other things without Hans, are not worth while!"

"You need not live alone," her father assured her. "Hans can go on living in you. That is the only way to think of the dead. What you loved in him, is his trust to you. You keep him alive, by living. And with his qualities, as well as with your own—you can serve life. This belief that you should kill men for an idea is childish! Ideas cannot be shot! It is only the spoiled child that is angry with ideas other than his own, or with the people who believe such ideas. But you kill yourself, too, too show yourself an enemy of life. Do not play even with such an idea, for it would be to throw away all that Hans gave you—and all that your mother and I gave you—for we too love you. We too have placed in you our immortal hopes."

"But I am already dead," Freya pleaded, gazing at her father with all the cruel force of her young life, in her burning eyes. "Can't you see that I am dead? Surely I have a right to die—since they have killed my lover!"

"Who has killed your lover?" her father asked her gently. "Is it your country—Germany—that you wish to be revenged upon? A country is a mere lump of earth—without qualities or desires. A country cannot be killed or punished—it cannot serve or be served. It is but a part—and that a small part of our poor earth's crust. All ownership of it is imaginary. Try to think accurately of what has happened, for you will find it easier."

"Two very ignorant and helpless young soldiers were ordered to shoot anyone who crossed a certain piece of land, and because they had no law in their hearts strong enough to prevent their doing this senseless thing, they obeyed the order."

"But of what are they guilty—or those who gave them the order—since they, too, must be ignorant, ill-taught, helpless? Would you have men so ill-taught? You would then be an ally of such action! It is your business to learn science so that you may practice truth. I am tired of hearing people speak of their 'rights.' Such things also are imaginary. Your lover was a wise boy—believed in sharing. A man can share only what he has. You have much, and your 'right' is to share it! Leave it to those who have nothing—to kill and die! Such people have been defeated by themselves, before they have reached the feast of life. Like a hungry, half-witted giant, they stamp out the food that would have kept them alive. But you know better than this! You have a little of this food in your power to give—and you can make it live. But to give you must go on living. And your first step toward living is to sleep!"

"Have you told Rudi?" Freya asked her father anxiously. "Poor little Rudi! Hans was his first grown-up friend! And he was so proud of his friendship! He will think it so strange that any German could kill another German, as if he were an enemy!"

"It is indeed strange," her father agreed. "Later I shall tell Rudi—myself; unless you would like to tell him? It is better that he should know from one of those who loved Hans but there is no hurry; a time for such things happens of itself!"

Freya burst into tears. "Tell him—tell him," she sobbed. "I can't bear to see his face! It—it will disappoint him so much!"

"Yes, I will tell him," agreed her father. He did not seem to mind Freya's tears, and indeed—once she had begun to cry a strange thing happened to her—it was as if the stiffness of death passed out of both her body and her mind.

When Rudi heard that his father wished to see him in the study, a creepy feeling ran up his spine. It was not guilt, for if he had done wrong he knew that his father would not have sent for him; he would have come to meet Rudi, with an apologetic expression and had the mistake out—man to man—in as easy a manner as was compatible with the nature of Rudi's crime. No! What Rudi felt afraid of, was some sudden choice, throwing him back upon his own insufficiently trained desires. He remembered with a pang that he had had to choose last summer between a holiday with the others on the Starnberger See, full of bathing and unknown delights, or the grown-up role of accompanying his father and mother to Sweden, to see his father receive the Nobel prize. He longed to see his father get his prize, to swell the thrill with the thought: "I am this man's son. His greatness is mine! None of the other boys have such a father!" On the other hand he wanted to get on with swimming and Emil had promised to teach him to crawl. Besides, what might not the older children discover or enjoy during his absence?

It was an irrevocable, anxious choice, and Rudi felt that he had made the wrong one. He started off with his parents to Stockholm; but on the way there he was very sick in the train. His father, after attending to him three times in the lavatory, and putting eau-de-Cologne on a head bursting with hidden disappointments, had hit on the happy thought of sending Rudi home from the next station; but the Starnberger See had been nothing like as exciting as Rudi had expected, and Emil had been too impatient to teach him how to crawl.

Something like this might be going to happen again, and his father would do nothing to help him. "Ach, Rudi!" he would say, with those little eyes far back in his head twinkling like sparks of fire, "but this is none of my business! Do what you like! A man who cannot find out what he really likes, will never find out anything!"

Rudi took the last stairs very slowly, and was relieved when he opened the study door, to see that at least his father was not twinkling—studying the map of his father's face with the swift knowledge of a trained explorer—Rudi saw that he was not going to be called on to make a choice, on the contrary he was going to be told something that had no choice about it.

His father gave him a long, measuring look, and said: "Well—how was it at school today?" but this was not the eager note in this voice that usually went with this familiar question. Nor was Rudi very anxious to impart what had taken place at school that morning. He leaned against his father's desk and began to fiddle with a paper-weight made like an elephant, a present he himself had given to his father long ago, when it had cost him something to give away even the vestige of so choice an animal.

"It was not bad," Rudi began reluctantly, "not too bad—but a funny thing happened. Herr Muller said once more—all that about Nordic blood we have to learn; and a boy sitting next to me asked to change his desk, he said I smelt like a Jew! Is it true, father, that we Jews smell differently from other people?"

His father twirled his heavy eyebrows in a comical way he had, as if they also could talk. "Ah!" he asked, "and how long had this boy's desk been next to yours, my son?"

"We have sat together nearly two years now—Peter" was once my friend," Rudi explained.

"And he has only just noticed this strange smell?" his father commented, "it cannot then, I think, be very strong or very unfavorable—or else he would have suffered from it before—nicht wahr? What did Herr Muller say to him, my boy?"

"He told him to go on with his work," Rudi explained, "but after recess his desk was changed and now I sit alone by the window. After school Herr Muller kept me, and was very kind."

"He asked me if I minded very much being a Jew. I told him what you had said about Jews, and he said, 'Believe always those words of your father's, but do not repeat them to anyone. If you are out in a storm you must bow to it.' But then he asked about my work, and if my marks were as usual—and they are not—some of the meters mark me always lower, though I work as hard and he said not to be discouraged about this—for he was after all the head master, and he would from time to time examine me in all my subjects, and see that I was fairly marked. So now I am less anxious than I was; but he said about play he could do nothing and I must look after myself."

Your Horoscope for Today

By ALICE DENTON JENNINGS, Noted Atlanta Chirologist

What today means to you if you were born between:

March 21 and April 19 (ARIES)—More will be accomplished today if you proceed with caution. The period is inauspicious for voluntary changes or alterations in existing plans.

April 2 and May 20 (TAURUS)—The best part of the day is previous to 10:06 a. m. Between 10:06 a. m. and 3:46 p. m. care and economy should be practiced. The remainder of the day and evening suggest sticking to routine matters.

May 21 and June 30 (GEMINI)—The best part of the day is previous to 6:38 p. m. The period favors dealing with professional people, associates and parents. Pay attention to finance, and avoid undue chances where money is involved. The evening hours favor pleasures, friendships, art and music.

June 21 and July 22 (CANCER)—The better part of the day is the period previous to 2:41 p. m. The period favors general business activities, dealings with those at the head of affairs. After 2:41 p. m. special care should be used in making agreements or signing papers.

July 23 and August 22 (LEO)—Previous to 10:29 a. m. favors important financial transactions, dealings in legal and educational affairs. After 10:29 a. m. you may find yourself highly inspired, and it would be well to put your inspirational ideas into effect. Pay attention to diet and use special care in travel.

August 23 and September 22 (VIRGO)—Previous to 10:38 a. m. may be an exacting time when sudden demands may be made with startling force. Plan to exercise discretion and self-control, for changes and flare-ups in speech or action are not favored.

September 23 and October 22 (LIBRA)—Previous to 7:26 p. m. favors general business activities, home and social ideas, travel, interviews and those things which are related to comfort and refinement.

October 23 and November 21 (SCORPIO)—The entire day favors social affairs, new friends, domestic affairs and financial dealings. The best influences of the day operate after 2:30 p. m.

November 22 and December 21 (SAGITTARIUS)—The period previous to 12:20 noon favors financial interests, social affairs, communications, dealings with brothers and sisters. After this period be on your guard against pitfalls, deceptions, impatience and irritations.

December 22 and January 19 (CAPRICORN)—This is a period to be especially on guard against misunderstandings, broken promises and malicious accusations.

January 20 and February 18 (AQUARIUS)—The entire day and evening favors property interests, domestic and home affairs. From 6:42 p. m. and throughout the evening favors making plans for future activities.

February 19 and March 20 (PISCES)—From 10:18 a. m. and through 1:13 p. m. favors the advancing of ordinary business interests. Be especially cautious in travel after 5:23 p. m.

Learns With Sadness Apple Pie Is Chock Full of Vitamin C

Often I wish the scientific dietitians would lay off the ordinary good things of life and confine their researches to caviar and humming birds' livers and such exotic viands.

Because I've just read that apple pie is chock full of vitamin C, which is good for scurvy and what not.

There goes my appetite for apple pie, which I have long loved with a devotion that passeth understanding. Especially with a slab of cheese. Plain American cheese. Roquefort goes well with the after-dinner coffee and Swiss on rye is a twin brother of a stein of beer. But for good old American apple pie, give me American cheese. They are in complete harmony.

But—as I started to say—I'm afraid I'll be off apple pie for a while. Because never since I was a barefoot-boy with cheeks of tan and a stonebruise on my left big toe, have I liked any food which was good for me. Take spinach, for instance. Sure, go on and take it. Take my portion.

I think the old-fashioned doctors started me that way. No medicine had any real virtue if it didn't taste like something dug from an Egyptian tomb, with added quantities of bitter and sour and hot and nasty. I assume that if doctors still serve those oily and nauseating panaceas from the rusty old iron tablespoon the housewives keep in the kitchen for such emergencies they first administer an anesthetic. Pulling a tooth calls for novocaine or something just as good. And I'd rather have two teeth—large, double-rooted teeth—extracted than suffer one generous dose of castor oil.

It was like that with food. Rice pudding was reputed to be healthful. I learned to hate it. Graham bread built bone or muscle or something. I yelled for hot biscuits. And now I'll look upon apple pie with suspicion and order mince instead. Though I never did care for mince. It always arrived after I was chock full of turkey and dressing and my interest in food had dwindled.

I do hope nobody discovers boiled onions, with plenty of melted butter and black pepper are loaded with vitamin X, Y or Z. Because I'm terrifically fond of boiled onions and hope to stay that way.

How Come?

Earl Baswell, publisher of the Athens Banner-Herald, has been appointed to the board of regents of the University System of Georgia and the Augusta Herald says, in an editorial: "The appointment will meet with statewide approval, outside Atlanta."

Why outside Atlanta? Can't Atlanta appreciate a good man who doesn't reside within a stone's throw of Five Points? Personally, I refuse to permit anybody to like Earl Baswell more than I do—and I think that goes for all Atlantans who know him.

Nice to Hardy

Albert Hardy, of the Gainesville News, back from New York, writes that in all his visits he has never been treated discourteously by a New Yorker.

Albert must have been exceptionally generous with his tips. I, callous soul, would rather lunge a taxi driver a dime over his 30-cent fare and suffer a sneer than give him a quarter and receive—perhaps—a thanks. A taxi driver's contumely rarely keeps me awake more than 40 minutes, but 15 cents will buy a cup of coffee. If you pick your spot.

Pittsburgh husband told the judge his wife refused to cook, threw bricks and clocks at him, bought costly clothes and charged them to him, threw his only suit out of a window and punctured his tires with an ice pick. The court took the divorce suit under advisement.

I wonder if he thought to tell the judge she washed all the ash trays every day and stacked them up in some mysterious cabinet where he couldn't find them.

New edition of Social Register reveals 69 fewer yacht owners than the year before.

This country is most assuredly bound hellward with the devil having a tail holt and a downhill drag. There could be no more accurate barometer of conditions than yachts in or out of commission.

News from Albany is that the damage from the tornado has pretty well been repaired. I'd say "business as usual" has been resumed, except that it never did stop.

Anyway, residents of the smaller towns within 50 miles of Albany will be glad. I have one friend whose house suffered from fire and up to last week there was not a carpenter to be had in her county. They were all in Albany putting in full time and overtime. It's an ill wind, as the feller said, which blows nobody good.

Batista and Ticket Leading in Cuba

HAVANA, July 15.—(AP)—Presidential Candidate Colonel Fulgencio Batista, all six of his political coalition gubernatorial candidates and at least 90 of his 126 mayoral candidates appeared victorious tonight.

Returns from 2,978 of Cuba's 5,590 precincts in Sunday's election gave Batista 447,954 votes to 278,328 for his opponent, Dr. Ramon Grau San Martin. On these returns, Batista appeared to have won in all six of the Cuban provinces.

SNAIL MOTIF Now that Paris has fallen, Hollywood aspires to be style arbiter. Here's Claudette Colbert in a black wool with snail motif.

Farley and Perkins Put Heads Together

DID FARLEY TELL? It looks as if Postmaster General James A. Farley may be telling secrets—possibly the one President Roosevelt confided in regard to his third-term plans—as the postmaster and Secretary of Labor Perkins get their heads together in Chicago, where they're attending Democratic convention.

THEY WANT WILLKIE The name of Wendell L. Willkie, Republican choice for president, was suggested for the Democratic nomination yesterday by a group of Texans, who took themselves with utter seriousness, even if nobody else did. Here's part of the group, gathered around their banners in Chicago.

SILVER, WHITE make an evening gown for lovely Ellen Drew, of the films. Hollywood is planning to spend a lot of money—perhaps up to $5,000,000 a year—to show American women how to dress, hoping to take the place of Paris in styles.

RED INSERTS trim the blue cotton dress worn here by Judy Garland, talented young singing star of the screen. Styles like this may mould U. S. fashion in the future.

Says Unshaken Will In Britain Necessary To Defeat Germany

Prime Minister Churchill places the British national will to fight first among the weapons of defense mustered in a month of dreadful expectancy of German blitzkrieg.

"Hitler has not yet been withstood by a great nation with a will power equal to his own," Churchill said in a new world-wide broadcast of Britain's determination.

Without that unshaken and unshakable public will to carry on, both in England and in the vast British empire of which it is the hub, other weapons which the British war captain enumerated, formidable as they are, would be insufficient to back his confident forecast of British survival and ultimate victory. With it, his picture of England enduring air and sea siege for more than a year, then turning on her foe in 1942 the harnessed war powers of the empire well could prove an inspired vision of what the future holds.

Certainly Churchill and his cabinet stand at a point where shrewd, realistic appraisal of their assets and liabilities must guide their actions and decisions. They must know, not merely guess, at the will of English men and women at home or scattered about the world to endure to the end.

"Rotting From Within." Of other countries, including France, which have succumbed to the German war machine, Churchill said they had "rotted from within" before they were smitten from without.

"How else can you explain what has happened to France, to the French army, to the French people, to the leaders of the French people?" he asked. There can be little doubt that the next month will bring a test of his asserted supreme confidence in British will to fight for England foot by foot, city by city, street by street, house by house, and beyond that even, sea by sea around the world.

History will record that the battle of Britain began June 18, 1940, with collapse of France. There remain three months or less of this year before winter intervenes in western Europe. Its long nights, fogs and frequent storms must prove an added handicap to Germany's principal weapon of attack, air power. Britain's navy and the merchant ships that are England's life line use the seas in all weathers.

Three months of endurance will might see England past the crisis. That is the meaning of Churchill's summary of her readiness now, as she was not a month ago, to meet whatever is to come. And it is a very imposing aggregate of defensive battle strength that he listed.

England is garrisoned by nearly half a million more troops today than the armies of the whole British empire and their trained reserves represented at the outset of the war. Exclusive of the "home guard" a million strong, formed to meet "Fifth Column" attack of any nature, she has 1,500,000 mobile army forces under arms by Churchill's count.

Britain's Warships.

She has a thousand ships of war at sea, he said, and the merchant tonnage under her flag is greater than when she entered the war, supplemented by requisitioned Scandinavian, Low Country and French shipping as well as captured German and Italian tonnage.

In the Mediterranean, there is already being fought a preliminary to the final reckoning between air and sea power upon which the outcome of the war in Europe hinges. Its progress is obscured by conflicting accounts from London and Rome, yet Churchill must have had reliable information upon which to base judgment of the significance of that action as it affects the larger question of the fate of England or the British empire.

It is worth note that Italian claims of victories over British naval forces attribute the results exclusively to aircraft and submarines. There is no indication that Fascist navy units have attempted to match British sea power there since the first clashes of last week.

In weighing England's chances of beating off invasion, there is a favorable circumstance not specifically included in the Churchill summary, although it is implied. Her armies hold the short inside lines, whereas the powerful Nazi war machine is now dispersed over central Europe. Norway, Denmark, the Low Countries and two-thirds of conquered France.

Defenders of England, once the scope of a German attack at any point becomes clear, can be rushed in overwhelming numbers to meet it.

As Havana Topic

WASHINGTON, July 15.—(UP) The future status of European possessions in this hemisphere loomed tonight as the No. 1 topic of the Pan-American consultative conference which starts at Havana Saturday.

As Secretary of State Cordell Hull completed preparations for his departure for Havana, where he will be the United States delegate, it was learned that various proposals are being studied by the 21 American nations in connection with suggested mandates for New World territories of European nations, particularly those of France and Holland.

Hull indicated a number of the Americas have advanced projects regarding the question of mandates, but he declined to amplify his remarks. He said there was not information so far to warrant a discussion.
